Family Row At Beltsville Ends in Blast Of Gunfire

Husband May Die; His Young Nephew Tells of Fleeing On Threat to Kill

An estranged wife and her father were shot last night in Beltsville, Md., by a Hyattsville iceman, who then put a bullet through his own head.

The husband, Alfred W. Fleshman, 34, was reported near death at Leland Memorial Hospital in Riverdale.

His wife, Marjorie, 23, was in critical condition in a nearby room at the same hospital but doctors gave her a chance to live.

Her father, Clarence E. Hawkins, 48, a roofing contractor, escaped with only a grazed cheek. He was released after treatment at the hospital.

According to Prince Georges County police, the triple shooting took place at about 8:30 p. m. outside the Hawkins' home which is just off Baltimore blvd. in Beltsville.

County Detective Richard Pearson said Fleshman called at the house and asked to speak to his wife from whom he had been separated for about three months.

Mrs. Fleshman, Pearson said, refused to go alone into the front yard with her husband. Her brother, Charles E. Hawkins, 16, accompanied her to the front gate where she talked with her husband.

The brother told police the couple began to argue about a $54 electric bill they had run up while living together at 8806 56th ave., Berwyn, Md.

He said Fleshman insisted he wanted to speak privately to his wife. The brother refused to leave, however, and his sister clung to his arm.

Threat Claimed

Then young Hawkins quoted Fleshman as threatening:

"If you don't leave, I'll kill you both."

With this, he said, Fleshman pulled a .32-caliber automatic from his pocket and lunged toward the boy.

The brother said he grabbed for the gun but missed and the weapon was discharged into the air. Frightened, young Hawkins turned and ran to a neighbor's house nearby. The wife, too, apparently started to flee. She turned and started to race back into the house.

"As I ran," young Hawkins told police, "I looked back and saw a gun-flash and saw Margie fall to the ground."

Police said the bullet struck Mrs. Fleshman in the back, just above the heart, and penetrated her body, emerging high in the chest.

Father Hit

As she fell wounded she screamed to her father inside the house. When her father ran from the house onto the front porch, Fleshman, about 25 feet away, fired twice at him, police said.

One shot grazed the older man's cheek. The other missed him completely.

Battered Ship Demands U. S. Provide Safe Passage to Port

Aboard the Flying Arrow, Tuesday), Jan. 10 (AP).—Chinese Nationalist gunboats that heavily damaged this blockade-running United States freighter yetserday continued to shadow her today. She lay at anchor in international waters off the Yangtze River approach to Communist Shanghai.

The Flying Arrow was riddled by 30 to 40 direct hits.

Behind the Chinese craft was the British sloop Black Swan, keeping a close watch.

Capt. David Jones, 31, declared the Flying Arrow was unseaworthy and demanded that the United States State Department take steps to provide safe passage into the nearest port for repairs, in accord with international practice for disabled ships.

The nearest port is Shanghai, for which this ship sailed early Saturday from Hongkong in defiance of the Nationalist naval blockade and the danger of mines.

Jones declared the attack occurred 19 miles off shore, clearly outside territorial waters.

None of the crew of 43 and the 12 passengers, was injured.

The Flying Arrow, however, was hit in many places and set afire. The British sloop Black Swan, which was patrolling near by, sent a fire-fighting party aboard and helped subdue the flames.

Thirty-eight rounds were fired before a hit was scored. Many hits were in the steering gear house and No. 5 hold. Fire began quickly in the cargo of cotton.

50,000 Out In 7-State Mine Strike

Congress Group Acts to Force Truman Move; Lewis Fires Blast

By The Associated Press

The coal controversy hit the boiling point again yesterday with groups of miners going out on strike in seven States and a move starting in Congress to force White House action.

John L. Lewis, whose three-day work week for miners stirred the uproar, fired back at those who have been demanding Government action.

Lewis said Senator Taft (R., Ohio) and others who have been calling on President Truman to invoke the Taft-Hartley law's national emergency provisions are trying to "oppress the mineworkers and cripple their union."

Lewis, in a statement, called Taft the "flamboyant oppressor of the poor." He tagged Robert N. Denham, general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, the "hatchet man for the hi-profit tong."

50,000 of 400,000 Out

About 50,000 of Lewis' 400,000 soft coal miners, members of the United Mine Workers Union, went out on strike in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky, Alabama, Virginia and Utah. The pits of steel companies and the big Consolidation Coal Co. were made idle.

Thirty-nine mines, employing 22,100 miners and capable of producing 120,000 tons of coal a day, are dark and silent in western Pennsylvania. Approximately 13,000 of the 110,000 West Virginia UMW miners are idle.

A week ago another regional strike idled 12,000 miners in Illinois, but Lewis sent them back to work after they had missed their three-day work week.

Lewis appeared to be pulling one group out, then another, in trying to get operators to accept his demands for a 95-cent daily wage increase for miners, plus a 15-cent boost in the present 20-cent tonnage royalty on coal production for the miners' welfare fund.

A group of Midwestern Republican legislators got behind a move to push a resolution through Congress declaring that the three-day week has caused an emergency coal shortage and asking Mr. Truman to act.

The President so far has said there is no emergency warranting his intervention. Under Taft-Hartley law he could declare an emergency, appoint a fact-finding board to sift the facts in the dispute, and then, when the board reports, seek a court injunction to restore five-day weekly production.

"No Emergency" View

A high Administration official said privately yesterday that White House thinking now is that there still is no emergency warranting the President's stepping in.

Denham also is considering an injunction against Lewis to restore full production. This could be sought under another section of the law. Coal operators have filed unfair labor practice charges, based on Lewis' tactics, and asked Denham to get a court order to stop them.

Senator Lucas (D., Ill.), Senate majority leader, who asked for a close White House study of the situation last week, yesterday said Lewis and the coal operators "had

Budget of $42,438,757,406 Means '51 Deficit Financing; D.C. Needs Set at $119,124,875

Commission Gets Pat on Back From House Unit for Balanced Proposal

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Washington's Commissioners, presenting a balanced $119,124,875 District budget to Congress, yesterday received a pat on the back for a "cautious" and "commendable" job from House members of both parties.

An $18,878,775 slice of the total is for public improvements, close to a third; $5,400,000 for the public schools. This speed-up school building program, if approved, will eliminate the problem of double-shift-part-time schooling for the foreseeable future, officials declared.

The new budget is for the year that starts next July 1. For the year that ends June 30, the budget disclosed, the Commissioners expect to ask Congress for appropriations totaling $7,290,446 to be added to the $103,139,280 already appropriated—mostly to cover increased pay costs this year.

Surplus Forecast

As a result, the proposed budget for next year is $8,695,149 higher than the estimated total of spending in the curent fiscal year. The new budget also allows room for additional appropriations of one million to cover later developments, and forecasts a surplus of close to two million at the end of June, 1951.

Chief features of the new budget were presented by District officials to the House Appropriations subcommittee in charge of the District appropriation during an afternoon executive session shortly after the District budget reached the Capitol as part of the President's budget message.

Representative Joe B. Bates (D., Ky.), subcommittee chairman, joined with Representative Sidney R. Yates (D., Ill.), in declaring that the District Commissioners had recommended a "cautious" budget program. They cited, too, the contrast with last year when the proposed budget was presented with an 18-million-dollar deficit in the hope that Congress would, as it did, enact a new revenue law including the two percent sales tax.

No Austerity

While still a cautious budget, Yates commented that it is not an "austerity" budget.

Representative Lowell Stockman (R., Oreg.), a member of the District Appropriations Subcommittee, said he felt the District Commissioners had done a commendable job in preparing the budget, and in keeping it as low as they did, "particularly in view of the tremendous population growth Washington has had since 1940."

He said Washington's growth since 1940 has been like that of Western boom towns.

In yesterday's opening Capitol hearing on the District budget, Commissioner John Russell Young told the Bates subcommittee "we believe the budget estimates are sound."

He was accompanied by Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, District Engineer Commissioner, and by District budget officials headed by Walter L. Fowler.

The executive hearing will resume at 10 a. m. today.

Federal Budget Highlights

Highlights of the President's budget message for the 1951 fiscal year:

Spending—$42,438,757,406, about 860 million dollars below the current year's level. The President called it a prudent budget, designed to meet "the realities of our present situation."

Deficit—$5,133,000,000 compared with $5,534,000,000 for this year. This would increase the public debt to about $263,800,000,000 by June 30, 1951.

Taxes—The President shortly will recommend tax changes to produce "some additional revenue in 1951 not reflected in this budget," and larger yields in future years. This was a veiled hint at increased corporation taxes.

International Programs—Including ECA and MAP, these total $4,711,000,000, a reduction of 1.3 billion dollars under this year. The cut is mainly reflected in the Marshall Plan, which would cost $3,250,000,000 compared with $4,062,000,000 this year. For military assistance to Atlantic Pact nations, the President proposed 1.1 billion dollars, including 500 million dollars in new contract authority. Mr. Truman said MAP spending "will remain substantial for several years . . ."

National Defense—$13,545,000,000, an increase of about 400 million dollars above current expenditures, "to maintain a position of relative military readiness." The President recommended extension of the draft, and again urged universal military training.

Veterans—$6,080,000,000, a decline of 825 million dollars under this year. Warning in effect against a general bonus or pension drive, the President asked Congress to provide "only for the special and unique needs of veterans arising directly from military service."

Other Government Costs—After deducting 5.6 billion dollars for interest on the debt, 12.5 billion dollars is left for all other domestic programs, such as housing, agriculture, public works, education, social welfare and the ordinary expenses of government. The President said that is possibly "too little."

Social Security—To finance broader coverage and more liberal benefits, the President asked Congress to raise payroll taxes from 1½ to 2 percent on employes and employers on January 1, 1951, instead of in 1952. He asked that the tax be applied to the first $4800 of the workers' income, instead of the first $3000.

Health—Mr. Truman renewed his call for a health insurance system. To defray initial costs of the plan he asked Congress to make effective next January 1 a "small payroll tax of one-fourth of 1 per cent each on employers and employes."

Unemployment Insurance—The President recommended legislation to bring more workers under the Federal-State unemployment compensation system, and to pay them larger benefits over a longer period. In addition he proposed a "reinsurance system" to provide grants for States whose reserves become temporarily low.

Civil Rights—Funds for the Justice Department to expand civil rights enforcement under present law, creation of an additional Assistant Attorney General to supervise a civil rights division, and establishment of a Fair Employment Practices Commission and a permanent Commission on Civil Rights.

Spending Estimates In Truman Message Are $5,133,171,372 Over Likely Revenues

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday, projected another year of deficit financing, but called it "sound" in the light of the cold war abroad and responsibilities at home.

He sent Congress a $42,438,757,406 budget for fiscal 1951 and said that if anything, it was "too little" to maintain our world position and support a "dynamic and growing" economy.

The proposed spending total is 860 million dollars less than current year outlays but exceeds expected revenues to the tune of a $5,133,171,372 deficit for the next fiscal year.

The longest message of record—some 35,000 words—was read to both Houses with many a hop, skip and jump. Then Republicans and conservative Democrats kicked up a storm about what they called more "sugar-coated red ink."

Anticipates Ruckus

Mr. Truman anticipated the ruckus but predicted Congress would come around to his own way of thinking.

"Irresponsible and short-sighted budgetary action could contribute to a worsening of the world situation and to a decline in production and employment in the United States," he told uneasy legislators.

Tax changes to shave moderately next year's deficit and yield larger revenues in years to come will be submitted to Congress in the next few days, but the President failed to specify the changes. There was just a hint of new taxes in the corporation field.

National defense and foreign aid spending again overshadowed domestic reforms, but Mr. Truman continued to plump for his "Fair Deal."

Would Boost Payroll Taxes

He asked a sharp increase in payroll taxes to finance broader Social Security coverage and more liberal benefits. To start a system of compulsory health insurance he proposed a small but entirely new payroll tax.

Although public works of the kind Congress goes for were held to minimums, Mr. Truman found room in his budget for increased appropriations to broaden unemployment insurance and launch new housing, health, aid to education and civil rights enforcement programs.

A synopsis of the President's message follows:

This budget is an expression in financial terms of the actions this Government can and should take now toward economic growth and

30,000 Italians Storm Plants; 6 Die, 110 Hurt

Modena, Italy, Jan. 9 (U.P.).—Six persons were killed and at least 110 injured today when about 30,000 strikers stormed six Modena factories and fought a pitched battle with police.

The strikers swarmed in with firearms, hand grenades, hammers, clubs and stones, and the police opened fire. The dead all were reported to have been victims of police gunfire.

Twelve hours after the first outbreak, activity in the city was virtually at a standstill. Movies, theaters, bars and restaurants were closed and streetcars and taxis were not operating.

Roads to Town Guarded

Police guarded all roads leading into Modena, to prevent the strikers from bringing in reinforcements, and severed telephone lines to other cities.

Meanwhile Communist-led steel workers, estimated at 400,000, prepared to strike for 24 hours beginning at 6 a. m. Tuesday in protest of the police action here.

A simultaneous 24-hour general strike was planned in Emilia Province, where Modena is situated. Workers in industrial Turin planned a day-long sympathy strike. In Florence, they will halt work for three hours, in Venice for 10 hours and in Leghorn for one hour.

Genoa and Verona workers also will stage a 24-hour strike, and at Alessandrio they will halt for six hours. Milan will have a 2½-hour strike.

At the same time Modena and Bologna will be isolated by a strike of railroad workers.

Minister Sues Red Chief

In Rome, Minister of the Interior Mario Scelba conferred with Communist Labor Chief Giuseppe de Vittorio on the situation. Scelba later saw Premier Alcide de Gasperi, who in turn called on President Luigi Einaudi.

Police said the workers were divided into six assault groups and timed their attacks to the same moment.

The outburst occurred during a one-day general strike called to protest the closing of a foundry, and officials believed it was a concerted Communist plan to occupy the plants.

Reinforced police, warned of possible trouble, were stationed at all six factories when the strikers swarmed through the gates.

Lifting of U. N. Ban on Franco Urged by Kee

A leading Administration spokesman in the House called yesterday for reversing the United Nations' ban on sending ambassadors to Franco Spain.

The spokesman was Chairman John Kee (D., W. Va.) for the Foreign Affairs Committee, who almost invariably goes down the line for Administration foreign policy.

Although Kee said the ideas in his carefully prepared speech were "essentially" his own, a State Department official said the speech had been "coordinated" with the department in advance of its delivery.

The speech gave every evidence of being a full-fledged policy statement intended to deflect congressional attacks over the Spanish issue.

It told the pro-Franco Congressmen, in effect, that the Administration was just as anxious as they to send an ambassador to Madrid, and would try to get the U.N. Assembly to reverse its ban imposed in 1946.

But it also reminded them that Spain was still "a Fascist state," and could only win a place in the western family of nations if it would "transform its government and mend its ways."

Kee said he thought sending an American ambassador would be "in order" as soon as the U.N. As-

Cripps Makes Bid For New Talks on Dollar Shortage

London, Jan. 9 (AP).—Sir Stafford Cripps made a bid today for new dollar talks with Canada and the United States.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer also told a news conference Britain is going to shave down the rate at which she is paying off her war debts in goods. He said Britain needs to sell the goods in dollar countries.

Cripps met with U. S. Treasury Secretary John W. Snyder and Canadian Finance Minister Douglas Abbott in Washington last September. Shortly afterward he announced devaluation of the pound from $4.03 to $2.80.

He said today he hoped another meeting "will not be long delayed" on Britain's dollar shortage problem because "this is a continuing study."

Parley at Ceylon Tackles Issue of Communist Asia

Columbo, Ceylon, Jan. 9 (AP).—The British Commonwealth foreign ministers conference opened today and at once grappled with the need to strengthen economic bulwarks against communism in Asia.

Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru of India told the conference that economic and social difficulties advanced communism and the best way to defeat it in Asia was to build up the prosperity of Asiatic peoples.

D. S. Senanayake, Ceylon's premier and foreign minister, was chosen permanent chairman.

Legal Betting on All Sports Proposed for New York State

New York, Jan. 9 (AP).—Mayor William O'Dwyer proposed today that New York State legalize betting on public sports events and put it under the control of a State agency.

The surprise proposal came on the heels of a sharp new crackdown on gambling in New York City, with 51 high-ranking police officials transferred and bookmakers reportedly fleeing to New Jersey.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and leaders of the Republican-controlled State Legislature declined immediate comment.

O'Dwyer, a Democrat, said he wanted it "distinctly understood that I do not favor wide-open gambling but controlled gambling by the State."

He said he would ask the Legislature, probably this week, for "courageous and sensible" action to wipe out antibetting laws and substitute legal betting under strict State control.

This would have to go before the State's voters in the form of constitutional amendments. O'Dwyer said it would be "just as beneficial to the State as the elimination of the Eighteenth Amendment was to the Nation."

Clapp Rules Out TVA-Type Development for Middle East

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

The man who directs the Tennessee Valley Authority went on record yesterday against starting TVA-type river developments to raise living standards in the Middle East.

Gordon R. Clapp, TVA board chairman, told the United Nations that any such ambitious projects were premature and unsound. As head of a U. N. Economic Survey mission recently sent to the area, Clapp reported:

"The region is not ready, the projects are not ready, the people and the governments are not ready, for large-scale development of the region's basic river systems or major undeveloped land areas. To press forward on such a course is to pursue folly and frustration and thereby delay sound economic growth."

Instead, the report called for four modest projects of land and water conservation in Lebanon, Syria, Jordan and Arab Palestine, with the labor of some of the 900,000 Arabs made homeless by the Palestine war.

Yesterday's budget disclosed that President Truman would ask Congress for 27 million dollars as the American share of caring for the Arab refugees and putting them to useful work. His request may come before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee early next week.

Apart from helping to solve the Arab refugee problem, the Clapp report also came as a guide to future American efforts elsewhere in Asia. The State Department has been working for months on plans of technical assistance and investment to combat poverty and hunger in backward areas.

Now it has new evidence, on competent authority, that money and technical help alone will not solve the problem of underdeveloped areas if the people of those areas lack the will to help themselves.

In ancient days "the Middle East led the world in what was then the modern way," the report said.

"The deserts themselves offer the evidence, displaying the ruins of once-great cities and abundant relics of an ancient civilization. No sudden cataclysm of nature,

Court Denies Review, Kills Gag on Press

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Baltimore's gag rule on crime news is dead. The Supreme Court yesterday refused to consider an appeal from the Maryland Court of Appeals' decision against it.

The high court, as a whole, merely turned down the appeal by the State of Maryland with a single sentence. But Justice Felix Frankfurter, speaking for himself, issued a highly unusual 25-page opinion hinting that the court did not want to try at this time to define the hazy line between the rights of a free press and the rights of an accused man to a fair trial.

Frankfurter made these points:

1. The denial "does not remotely

Jobless Youth Plunges Four Floors to Death

A 17-year-old boy plunged to his death from a fourth-floor window at 308 7th st. sw. yesterday afternoon.

He was Lloyd Ashton Smith, who lived with his mother, Mrs. Addie Smith, and sister, Mrs. Laura Saams, at the 7th st. address.

Police said he was in the living room of their fourth-floor apartment with his nephew, 3-year-old Ronnie Saams, when he plunged. The child told them Lloyd suddenly pulled up the window, climbed out, stood a moment on the sill and then jumped, they said. Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Saams were in another room.

Marine Corps Amphibious Forces Slashed

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Marine Corps battalion landing teams have been cut from 11 to 6 in number under the 1951 defense budget, officials said last night.

This nearly 50 percent cut in Marine amphibious forces marked the chief surprise in President Truman's 13.5 billion defense budget submitted to Congress yesterday.

While the budget message itself reported the 1951 Marine battalion strength, Department of Defense officials questioned were unable to confirm that a cut was involved and have suggested that perhaps "six regimental landing teams" were to be maintained—a vast difference.

They referred queries to an extraordinary press conference on the new budget estimates called for this afternoon by Defense Secretary Louis Johnson. The three military department secretaries and the Joint Chiefs of Staff will be present, it was said, to explain operation plans for 1951.

As of last night, Gen. Clifton B. Cates, Marine Commandant, had not been invited to attend.

Despite the omissions—apparently to be explained at today's conference—the 1951 defense budget gives for the first time a fairly comprehensive picture of the effects of Secretary Johnson's unification and economy programs to date.

The 1951 military spending program provides for a million and a half men in the regular armed forces—about 100,000 fewer than planned in the fiscal 1950 budget—an organized, drilling reserve

Presbytery Approves Plan To Erect N. Y. Avenue Church

New York Avenue Presbyterian Church yesterday was given permission to demolish its 90-year-old building at 13th st. and New York ave. nw. and to erect an $893,000 church on the site.

Authorization was made at the monthly meeting of the Presbytery of Washington City at National Presbyterian Church, Connecticut ave. and N st. nw.

In addition the church won permission to borrow up to $300,000 to pay for construction of the new edifice, which will resemble the present building.

Final action will be taken by the congregation at its annual meeting on January 18. If the congregation approves, demolition will begin within a month.

Erection of the six-story church, which will contain greatly expanded space for worship services and educational work, will take about 15 months.

Officials are completing arrangements for a meeting place for the congregation while the church is under construction, according to the Rev. Robert T. Bridge, acting pastor.

Col. Gratz B. Strickler, chairman of the building committee, said the new building will be erected at the same time as an office building for the Virginia Hotel Co. on the land next to the church.

Million Sought To Erect Tomb for War II Unknown

Appropriation of one million dollars to provide a tomb for America's Unknown Serviceman of World War II was asked yesterday by President Truman.

Mr. Truman's budget message disclosed that preliminary plans for the tomb and alterations to the Arlington Memorial Amphitheater area have been approved by the Fine Arts Commission and the Arlington Memorial Amphitheater Commission.

Half of the appropriation—$500,000—would go toward construction of the tomb.

The other $500,000, President Truman said, would be needed "for expenses incident to the selection and burial with appropriate ceremonies of the remains of an unknown American who lost his life while serving overseas in the armed forces of the United States during the Second World War."

There was little comment on details of the proposed memorial from the various agencies involved. However, an officer in the office of the Quartermaster General of the Army did say that the new memorial will be near the tomb of the Unknown Soldier of World War I and that it is hoped to start construction of the new tomb during 1950.

U. S. Faces New Year Of Deficit Financing

the expansion of human freedom in our country and the world.

Budget expenditures under this program are estimated at 42.2 billion dollars for the 1951 fiscal year, about 869 million dollars below estimated spending for this year. Budget receipts are estimated at 37.3 billion dollars, a decrease of about 460 million dollars from this year.

The stimated deficit is thus 5.1 billion dollars, compared with an anticipated deficit of 5.5 billion dollars in the current year. Adjustments in our tax laws which will produce some net additional revenue in 1951, and a larger increase in future years, will shortly be recommended to Congress.

Requests for new appropriations and other obligations have been cut more than expenditures, to a total of 40.5 billion dollars. This means the downward trend in expenditures from 1950 to 1951 may be expected to continue.

Criteria for Program

This program provides a sound basis on which to proceed. The soundness of a fiscal program cannot properly be judged simply by the year-to-year change in the margin between receipts and expenditures. It must be judged first of all by whether it allows the people through their Government to meet the demands which the foreign and domestic situations put upon them.

The necessary functions of the Government require large expenditures but they are vital to our security, to the protection of our liberties, to continued social and economic progress, and to the welfare of our people. I am confident Congress will come to essentially the same conclusion.

Soundness of a fiscal program must also be judged by its impact on the economy. Irresponsible and short-sighted budgetary action could contribute to a worsening of the world situation and to a decline in production and employment in this country.

Judging Over Long Term

Finally, soundness must be judged in the light of where the program will take us over a period of years. These recommendations should move us toward a balanced budget in the next few years for three reasons:

(1) Policies followed in preparing this budget will permit further reductions in subsequent years. (2) Our economy is dynamic and as it grows tax revenues also will grow. (3) Forthcoming tax recommendations will place us in a better position to meet continuing requirements.

Thus the program is directed at achieving a balanced budget in the only way it can be achieved—by measures that support rather than impair the continued growth of our country. Its achievement does depend, however, on holding spending programs to no more than necessary levels.

Once again the budget is dominated by requirements to pay the costs of past wars and to achieve a peaceful world. Thirty billion dollars, or about 71 percent of the total budget, is provided for these two purposes. This is a reduction of 1.8 billion dollars under 1950 estimates.

Reduction in Air Funds

National defense and international programs will require about 18 billion dollars. Veterans' programs and interest on the public debt mainly stemming from the last war will require about 12 billion dollars.

The foreign recovery job is not yet complete, but progress made so far makes possible a substantial 1951 reduction. Spending for international affairs and finance are thus estimated at 4.7 billion dollars, a reduction of 1.3 billion dollars under 1950.

As foreign recovery and relief programs near their short-range goals, two other international activities assume increasing importance: (1) A program of technical and capital assistance to underdeveloped countries (Point IV) is again recommended to Congress. (2) Additional funds are recommended for the mutual defense assistance programs.

Estimated 1951 outlays for national defense, again the largest item in the budget, are 13.5 billion dollars, an increase of about 400 billion dollars over 1950. Veterans' services and benefits are estimated at 6.1 billion dollars, a decline of 825 million dollars. Interest on the public debt, mainly representing the cost of financing the last war, is estimated at 5.6 billion dollars, slightly lower than in 1950.

Domestic Program Increased

All other expenditures total 12.5 billion dollars—about 29 percent of the budget and an increase of about one billion dollars above 1950 estimates.

This 12.5 billion dollars provides funds for the positive functions Government must fulfill if we are to have a healthy and growing economy. It is not a question of doing too much, but rather one of doing too little domesticaly, because of the constraints of our National security and war-connected programs.

To assist economic development in the categories of housing and community development, agriculture, natural resources, transportation and communication, finance, commerce, and industry, and labor, 7.9 billion dollars is provided altogether, 19 percent of the budget total.

Included in this are some categories closely related to our national security. To push ahead with atomic energy development, for example, 817 million dollars is provided.

Here are some other items covered by the 12.5 billion dollars:

Federal aid to States for highways, 507 million dollars; river development for flood control, navigation, reclamation, power and other uses, 1.4 billion; aids to more and better housing, 1.3 billion; and farm land conservation and loans for extending electricity to farms, 800 million dollars.

Some Recoverable Items

Many expenditures represent acquisition of assets which are recoverable or will give continuing returns in future years. In normal business accounting these would not usually be considered current expense. The Government, in contrast to business, has to list them as outlays. Excluding military public works and equipment, such expenditures amount to 5.6 billion dollars in the 1951 budget. Of that figure, about 4 billion dollars is in the recoverable class.

For social welfare, health and security, the budget proposes 2.1 billion dollars, in addition to providing for the transfer of 594 million dollars of payroll taxes to the railroad retirement trust fund. For education and general research, 434 million dollars is proposed, about one sixteenth of total Federal expenditures.

The remaining programs, for general Government, total only 1.3 billion dollars. This provides for over-all legislative, judicial and executive operations of Government, and for central services, such as maintenance of public buildings. Included are 424 million dollars for tax collection and 333 million dollars for the Government payment to the civil service retirement fund.

Limited New Program

Only limited new domestic programs are proposed, mainly for middle income housing. Renewed, however, are previous recommendations for aid to education and expanded public assistance, chiefly in the form of grants to the States, and for enactment of social insurance legislation financed primarily by special taxes. No other new programs which would require large expenditures are asked.

Nor does the budget provide for starting any new reclamation flood control and rivers and harbors projects. The rise from 2.5 billion dollars in 1950 to 3.1 billion in 1951 for civil public works, mainly reflects minimum requirements of projects and programs now under way. Federal grants to States for public works have been similarly limited.

Action has been taken on many fronts to accomplish better management in Government, and further improvements will be vigorously pushed. Reports of the (Hoover) Commisston on Organization of the Executive Branch provided the framework for much that has and will be done.

Congress is asked for basic personnel legislation to improve Government recruiting, training and supervision of its employes. Congress also is urged to authorize the Postoffice to maintain its own accounts, handle its finances on a businesslike basis, and to permit appointment of postmasters by the Postmaster General.

Presented in New Form

Congress will receive a number of Government reorganization plans during the session. The goal of all will be establishment of clear lines of responsibility and authority for management of activities and more effective grouping of programs within Government agencies.

In line with these improvements, the 1951 budget is presented for the first time on a "performance" basis. In other words, the activities for which funds are recommended are described so that Congress and the public may see more clearly the relationship between the activities to be performed and the costs of those activities.

The 37.3 billion-dollar revenue estimate for 1951 assumes economic activity continuing at present levels, or a 255 to 260 billion-dollar national income. Decreased collections from corporation income taxes accounted for the principal decline, reflecting the decrease in profits from peak 1948 levels.

The 1950-1951 deficits will increase the public debt from 252.8 billion dollars last June 30 to 263.8 billion by the end of 1951.

ECA Still Important

Notable progress has been made toward foreign economic recovery, but some of the most difficult steps lie ahead. The threat of aggression still exists, requiring continued efforts to bolster the defenses of free nations.

For ECA, 3.1 billion dollars in new Marshall Plan appropriations is requested, more than a billion dollars less than Congress provided this year. To achieve an increased flow of trade and investment will require far-sighted and vigorous steps by European countries and other nations as well as our own.

Economic vitality alone will not suffice to prevent aggression. Stronger military defenses are required. For the current year Congress provided one billion dollars for military assistance to North Atlantic Treaty nations and 359 million dollars for other nations covered by the act. For 1951, Congress is asked for 1.1 billion dollars more for MAP, including 500 million dollars new contract authority.

Our own national defense budget provides for active forces in a high state of training, available for immediate use if necessary and as a nucleus for rapid expansion, in the event of emergency, and for reserve forces, organized and trained, for early mobilization if necessary. The estimated obligational authority for national defense in 1951 includes 4.0 billions for the Army, 3.9 billions for the Navy, and 4.4 billions for the Air Force.

UMT Again Urged

Extension of selective service authority will provide a temporary solution to the military manpower problem. But Congress is again urged to approve a program of universal training. (No UMT estimate is included in the budget, however.)

The 6.1 billion dollars estimate for veterans is one-seventh of all budget costs. It reflects a fivefold increase since 1939 in the number of living veterans and reflects the increases in rates of benefits and in services to veterans generally.

Our primary long-run obligations are to the two million veterans with disabilities incurred in the service and (300,000) families of veterans deceased from service causes. The remaining 17 million veterans are practically all without service disabilities. Most of the citizen-soldiers of World War II returned to civilian life four years ago and have had adequate time to re-establish themselves in their communities.

The original sound purposes of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act have largely been served. Some of the benefits under the act have already terminated and the need for others, such as education and training benefits, is drawing to a close. Veterans without service disabilities will continue to be eligible for liberal benefits under permanent veterans' laws after termination of temporary programs.

At the same time these veterans are eligible in many cases for benefits under the general social security programs. There is real cause for concern that we may overlook the close relationship of these two systems and superimpose on the general system of benefits and overlapping and unwarranted series of special benefits for veterans.

Urges Social Insurance

The coming year will be extremely significant for the Nation's social security program. The decisions of Congress on pending legislation will determine the direction this country will take in providing basic protection against major economic hazards of old age, unemployment, illness and disability. Congress is urged to pass the program submitted last spring. This will cover about 85 percent of all employed people and gradually reduce the need for public assistance.

Congress again is strongly urged to pass unenacted portions of the health legislation recommended last spring. A comprehensive system of prepaid medical care insurance should be geared in with our other social insurance programs and financed predominantly by employe contributions.

Congress also is asked to complete action soon on legislation to increase Federal assistance to local health services. In addition, legislation should be enacted to provide financial aid to medical and related schools to encourage the training of additional medical personnel.

In the case of nurses, tuition scholarships and subsistence aids should be made available for training graduate nurses, and grants should be made to the States for vocational education for practical nurses, to encourage more young women to enter the profession.

Housing Recommendations

Our housing and community development task this year is twofold. We must push ahead rapidly in carrying out major new programs and must further improve Federal housing legislation. To close the biggest remaining gap, Congress should pass legislation aiding middle-income groups to obtain adequate housing they can afford. Budget estimates for housing and community development in 1951 are 1.3 billion dollars, compared with one billion dollars last year.

If education and research are to play their full role in strengthening our democratic society, we must expand our basic research (National Science Foundation), we must devise types of education that will prepare youth more effectively for participation in modern society, and we must provide better educational opportunities for more of our people (Federal aid to education).

Congress is urged to complete Senate-passed legislation permitting the Government to aid the States in support of a basic minimum program of elementary and secondary education.

In addition, one million dollars is included in the budget to finance a proposed limited Federal program to assist capable youths who cannot now afford a college education to attend institutions of their choice.

Altogether, the budget provides 434 million dollars for education and general research in 1951, compared with 125 million dollars in 1950—proposed legislation entirely accounting for the increase.

American agriculture is in a period of transition. The shift from war to peacetime needs has caused a decline in farm prices and a loss in farm income, but operation of Government price supports has been a major factor in preventing a serious postwar recession. Resulting benefits to workers and employers, as well as to farmers, have been many times the Federal outlay of funds.

Federal spending for agriculture and agricultural resources increased from 2.5 billion dollars in 1949 to an estimated 2.7 billion in 1950. Both years reflect the operation of price support programs as farm prices declined. A 465-million-dollar decrease in expenditures is expected in 1951. This should result from smaller outlays on price supports as acreage allotments and marketing quotas serve to reduce production of some 1950 crops.

The 1950 budget provides for total expenditures of 2.2 billion dollars in the field of natural resources, an increase of 373 million dollars from 1950. More than one third of the total and of the increase is attributable to expenditures for atomic energy.

The United States is seeking both to develop atomic energy for national defense purposes and to realize the great promise in its use for industrial and other peacetime purposes. Our atomic energy program is a large venture in diverse fields — scientific research, medicine, engineering, industry. It will continue to require substantial outlays in the next few years.

In the transportation and communication field, the Government will spend an estimated 1.7 billion dollars in 1951, a decline of 212 million dollars from 1950. This assumes a reduction of the postal deficit to a reasonable level, through enactment by Congress of postal rate increases.

Total 1951 outlays for promotion and regulation of finance, commerce and industry are estimated at 212 million dollars. Expenditures for loans to business will account for about three-fourths of this.

Federal programs in the field of labor will cost an estimated 243 million dollars in 1951, compared to 219 million this year. About 70 percent of the total will go as grants to the States for administration of the Federal-State employment service and unemployment compensation system.

During last year's temporary rise in unemployment, major shortcomings of the present system of unemployment compensation became painfully clear. Legislation will be submitted to Congress increasing coverage and setting minimum Federal benefit standards to remove some of the present inequalities in administration among the States. In addition, Congress will be asked to provide grants to States whose reserves for benefits become temporarily low, despite reasonable measures to maintain adequate funds.

Two legislative proposals respecting employment conditions and one on training are also asked. First, a permanent Fair Employment Practice Commission should be established. Secondly, grants to States should be authorized to encourage industrial safety. Finally, a labor extension service should be established in the Labor Department.

GOP Seeks Budget Cuts, Hits at MAP

By The Associated Press

Republican leaders in Congress took one look at President Truman's $42,439,000,000 budget yesterday and vowed to cut it. Many Democrats also expressed misgivings over the prospect of another 5 billion dollars of Red ink spending.

Representative Joseph W. Martin (Mass.), house GOP leader, got out a statement saying "the Republicans in Congress have no intention of accepting this budget and will work night and day, if necesary, to bring it within the bounds of the capacity of the people to pay."

Martin called the President's spending program "juggling of public funds for political purposes."

Similarly, Senate Republican leader Wherry (Neb.) said the budget message was a "purely political" document that "sugar-coats red ink with flights into the great blue yonder."

Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.) called the budget message "startling" and "extremely dangerous." He said it was the first time the President had failed to at least propose a balanced budget.

The Virginian promptly submitted "for consideration of Congress" an expenditures budget of only 36 billion dollars.

Some of the critics estimated that actual spending would jump up toward 50 billion dollars if the President's program was approved. One was Representative Stefan (R., Neb.). Another was Representative Taber (R., N. Y.), ranking Republican on the house appropriations committee.

Taber said Mr. Truman was really asking for $50,833,000,000. He contended the budget did not include prospective 1950 deficiency items, contract authorizations, and the cost of new legislation.

But Senator Aiken (R., Vt.) said he doubted there would be much real cutting of the President's budget despite all the talk. He said: "It is going to be difficult to pare it any in this election year."

One of the first budget items to draw critical questioning was the President's recommendation for one billion dollars of military aid to North Atlantic Allies.

On that, Senator Fulbright (D., Ark) said: "I'm not so keen about providing another one billion dollars for military aid for Europe. I want to hear the justification for it."

Senator Smith (R., N. J.) said: "that billion for military aid for Europe seems a large amount. I shall want to study that request very carefully."

Other comment:

Senator Taft (R., Ohio): "The deficit shows the President's talk about economy and budget balancing was only for window-dressing purposes. The long list of spending projects he has outlined would make any budget balancing impossible."

Senator McClellan (D., Ark.): "The President's budget indicating another deficit of more than five billion dollars strongly accentuates again the necessity for rigid economy in Government spending. The present fiscal policy, if continued, will carry us further down the road to national insolvency."

Representative Arends of Illinois, assistant Republican House leader: "The President is helping lay the bricks in the road which paves the way for economic ruin for this country."

Representative Doughton (D., N. C.), chairman of the Tax-Writing House Ways and Means Commitee: "In the next few years I hope it (the budget) will be balanced, but that depends a good deal on what is done about increased taxes and cuts in Government expenditures."

Rent boosts for 600 Navy families here and cost of living increases for a large number of others in the armed forces are proposed under President Truman's new budget.

Tucked away in the "fine print" at the back of the voluminous document are several proposed legislative "riders" which would cost many servicemen more money to live next year. The provisos, recommended for inclusion in the 1951 defense appropriation bill, would:

(1) Ban Navy and Marine Corps families from occupying "substandard" military quarters and paying rent instead of forfeiting their rental allowances. Some 600 housing units at Bellevue and a few units at Quantico, Va., are affected, the Navy said, among 100 housing developments totaling 31,000 units throughout the country.

If Congress approves the proviso, after July 1 the Government would pay the cost of upkeep of the quarters and military personnel would be docked for their rental allowances. This is considerably higher than the rent now paid. Army and Air Force spokesmen said all their personnel now lose their rental allowances if occupying any military quarters.

(2) Require all service messes to fix their charges for meals to officers and civilians at a level to include operating costs as well as the cost of the food. At present operating expenses, including lights, fuel, gas for cooking, cost of kitchen utensils are paid by the Government.

This would mean an increase in the monthly board bills of officers living in bachelor quarters, mostly young officers, as well as older officers with families while on temporary stations.

(3) Bar enlisted men from serving as stewards, cooks, waiters, etc., as officers' messes, clubs and in officers' residences. Exceptions include: men specifically enlisted for stewards service while aboard ship; foreign attaches' residences abroad; retired enlisted personnel or fleet reservists; enlisted men paid for such service while off duty.

Another "rider" proposed would deny Navy officers the right to draw back pay, when promoted, to the date when the vacancy they are to fill first existed, as at present.

Marine Corps Landing Teams Cut From 11 to 6 in '51 Budget forces of 979,000—some 100,000 more than now.

An even two billion dollars is asked for ordering 2152 new warplanes in 1951. This compares with 2.3 billions proposed in the 1950 budget, 2.75 billions voted by Congress and 1.9 billion in contracts actually to let this year under the cutback program.

No Warship Program

There will be no 1951 warship construction program, as reported last week in The Washington Post, while funds for ordering new Army tanks, antiaircraft guns and other weapons and equipment are substantially increased.

The clearest portrayal of the effects of high-level Pentagon actions of the past year, however, is in a comparison of the projected Army, Navy and Air Force operating forces for next year with those planned a year ago.

As set forth in the 1951 budget and drawn out by reporters' questions at a Pentagon budget "seminar," the picture emerges of the Army and Air Force continued at approximately the same strength, with modest modernization programs, and the Navy and Marine Corps declining.

Actual over-all expenditures for defense in fiscal 1951 will total $13,545,000,000 — an increase of 397 million over 1950. However, in new "obligational authority"—the money and contractual authority left to spend after paying off old obligations—13.7 billion is asked. This is 1.2 billion less than allowed in 1950.

Due to Heavy Obligations

The increase in money paid out of the Treasury next year—despite the economy program—is due to the fact that heavy obligations, contracted for this year and last, must be met by cash payments in 1951. The full effects of the economy program will not be felt until the year after.

Here is a comparison of 1951 operating forces with those mapped for the current year in the budget presented to Congress just a year ago.

ARMY

Money (new obligational authority)—1950 budget, 4.4 billion; 1951, four billion.

Manpower—1950 budget; Regular Army, 677,000 officers and men; National Guard, 325,000; Reserves in drill status, 230,000. 1951 budget: Regular Army, 630,000 officers and men; National Guard, 350,000; Reserves, 255,000. This is a 7 percent cut in the Regulars, a 7 percent increase in the Guard and 10 percent increase in drilling Reserves.

Combat Units — Ten divisions were provided in both the 1950 and 1951 budgets.

AIR FORCE

Money (new obligational authority)—1950 budget, 4.5 billion; 1951, 4.4 billion.

Manpower—1950 budget: Regular USAF, 412,000 officers and men; Air National Guard, 45,500; Air Reserve (drilling units), 67,500. 1951 budget: Regular USAF, 416,000; Air Guard, 49,500; Reserve, 68,600. This represents nearly a 10 percent increase for the Air Guard, and about a 2 percent increase in the Reserve. The apparent increase in the regular Air Force actually involves almost identical strength, as the additional men were engineers and medicos formerly carried on Army rolls but assigned to the USAF.

Combat Units — Forty-eight groups and 13 separate squadrons were provided under both the 1950 and 1951 budgets.

Operating Planes—1950 budget, 9217 aircraft in active inventory; 1951, 8800 planes—a cut of 4½ percent.

NAVY

Money (new obligational authority)—1950 budget: 4.2 billion; 1951, 3.9 billion.

Manpower—1950 budget: Regular Navy, 441,600 officers and men; regular Marine Corps, 85,700; drilling Reserves, (Navy-Marines), 280,000; 1951 budget: Regular Navy, 386,400; regular Marine Corps, 74,400; Navy-Marine drilling Reserves, 254,850. This is a cut of 12½ percent in regular Navy strength, a 13 percent cut in the Marines, and a 9 percent in Reserve strength.

Operating ships—1950 budget: 731 ships of all types in operation, including 288 combat vessels. 1951 budget: 652 ships in operation, including 238 combatant types. This is a cut of 10 percent in total vessels and 17 percent in combat ships.

Operating planes—1950 budget, 7450; 1951 budget, 5900. A cut of 20 per cent. Marine Corps air squadrons were cut from 23 to 12, Navy groups to a lesser extent.

Funds for 1383 Planes

After paying off prior year plane contract authorizations, $2,018,000,000 will be left in the '51 budget for ordering 1383 Air Force planes of 21.3 million airframe pounds and 769 Navy planes of 8.1 million pounds. The money division is $1,350,000,000 for the Air Force and $650 million dollars for the Navy.

This year, under the "adjusted program, 1250 USAF planes weighing 23.5 million pounds, and 768 Navy planes weighing 6.9 million pounds are being ordered, the budget disclosed.

Of the two-billion-dollar 1951 fund for new orders, 851 millions represents funds voted by Congress last session for aircraft but deferred until 1951 on orders of President Truman or Secretary Johnson. Thus, strictly speaking, this is not "new obligational authority" and the budget could have been shown to be that much less.

Planes for Reservists Training

The budget also revealed that, counting in the contemplated new 1951 orders, 2801 aircraft will be actually delivered in fiscal 1950 (1803 Air Force and 999 Navy), 2317 planes will be delivered in 1951 (1372 Air Force and 945 Navy) and 3150 planes still will be on order for delivery in subsequent years.

For the first time, according to John P. Bracken, president of the Reserve Officers Association, funds specifically are earmarked for the active duty training of Reservists not members of the drilling units. Bracken said he understood that funds for training 15,000 Army Reserve officers, 10,000 Volunteer Navy Reserve officers and 5000 Volunteer Reserve enlisted men, and 6000 Air Force Reserves are included.

For procurement of new Army weapons—336 million dollars is asked in 1951 compared to 286 million for 1950—a 17 percent boost. In addition to this 50 million, the Army expects to get an unspecified amount of new equipment by repayment for surplus old stocks transferred under the MAP program.

In his budget message, President Truman declared that national defense expenditures are expected to approximate the 1951 level for the next few years. He declared the 1951 plan provided for balanced land, naval and air forces and noted that they would carry forward the cut-back 1950 strengths.

The President also said he would submit legislation for continuation of Selective Service, which he described as "vital as a positive demonstration of our resolve to maintain the strength of the free world."

This, however, said the President, is but a "temporary solution" of the military manpower problem and does not solve the problem of obtaining trained men for the reserves. He pointed out again the "necessity" of universal military training for this purpose, but, unlike last year, did not include funds in the budget for starting it.

Included in the defense budget was 500 million for stockpiling and 300 million for housing, construction of bases and other public works—to be submitted in detail later.

Army Slashes Funds

Army junkets for Congressmen will be few and far between next year, President Truman's 1951 budget would indicate.

The appropriation for "congressional 'travel" was slashed from $21,500 this year to $15,000 in 1951.

Overpass to Airport Sought

A request for $1,050,000 to erect a two-blocks-long overpass giving Washington National Airport direct access to highway Route 1 is contained in the President's budget message sent to Congress yesterday.

The elevated structure would run from the Public Roads buildings on the Airport property over Mount Vernon Memorial blvd. and the railroad tracks to the intersection of Route 1 with 26th st. in Arlington County. It is included in the Commerce Department budget request.

The right of way already has been purchased and plans drawn. Paul F. Steiner, Airport deputy director, said last night. The roadway will be two lanes wide with cloverleafs at each end.

At present the airport may be reached from Route 1 only by a roundabout route via Alexandria or the Mount Vernon boulevard except for a narrow tar road which runs from Route 1 under both the railroads tracks and the boulevard.

Steiner explained that large trucks have been unable to clear the low ceiling underpass and have been forbidden to use Mount Vernon blvd., necessitating reloading of equipment on smaller trucks. In a few cases special permits have been granted to use the boulevard, he said.

The underpasses are often flooded in quick downpours and impassable, Steiner said. Where the roadways enters the airport grounds it runs alongside the cutoff from the boulevard to the airport, causing a traffic hazard, Steiner pointed out.

'Performance' Budget Presented First Time

President Truman yesterday handed Congress the first "performance" budget in history—an entirely new arrangement of the old orthodox budget data along program or functional lines.

Early Soldiers' Home Merger With VA Seen in Budget

The President's budget message acknowledged yesterday that Soldiers' Home would soon be merged with the Veterans Administration hospital program.

The budget document pointed out that no appropriation for permanent improvements to the home is included "pending completion of negotiations affecting various phsaes of the Soldiers' Home operations."

Such negotiations, it was further noted, include "construction of a hospital on the Soldiers' Home site for the joint use of the Soldiers' Home and the Veterans Administration."

Reports of the negotiations have appeared in Washington newspapers for the past seven weeks, though no officials would permit use of their names on the potentially explosive subject. The home has been supported since its start by deductions from pay of enlisted men of the regular Army.

In past years, numerous Government officials have eyed the choice reservation as a possible site for their own agencies, only to withdraw in the face of criticism of usurping something "the boys paid for out of their own money."

The latest move, it has been reported, is the result of a combined effort of the White House, the Budget Bureau, the Secretary of the Army, the General Services Administration, and the Veterans Administration.

Its first maneuver proposes the construction of a nine-million-dollar veterans' hospital, originally scheduled for the so-called Nevius Tract, in Arlington County, Va., on Soldiers' Home grounds. Later, the planners reportedly agree, the entire reservations and its activites might be turned over to VA.

For 1952, the Soldiers' Home hospital is scheduled to care for 332 patients, and to provide hospital accommodations for an additional 60 patients in other Government hospitals. In addition, some 1100 aging veterans are accommodated in its domiciliary barracks.

'Oleo Trust' Probe Asked By Humphrey

Senator Hubert H. Humphrey (D., Minn.) yesterday called for an investigation of alleged monopoly in the oleomargarine industry.

He said in a statement that five companies produce about two thirds of the nation's oleo, and charge "whatever the traffic will bear."

Humphrey had planned to speak against the House-approved bill to repeal Federal taxes on oleo, but issued a statement instead when the Senate got sidetracked by foreign policy debate.

Senator Hugh Butler (R., Nebr.) introduced an amendment to tack excise tax reductions onto the oleo repealer.

Butler proposed that rates be cut to the 1943 level on jewelry, furs, toilet articles, electric light bulbs, luggage, transportation and communications.

Administration leaders hope to defeat the effort to add excise "riders." They fear it would cause President Truman to veto the entire bill.

Dairy State Senators have announced they are willing to let the bill come to a vote by Friday, and Senate Democratic Whip Francis J. Myers (Pa.) has predicted it will pass.

$2 Billion Increase For Welfare Asked

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Depending on how you figure it, Mr. Truman's budget calls for an increase of from $200 million to two billion dollars above present levels for "welfare" purposes in fiscal 1951.

This would be paid out of general aprpopriation funds.

In addition, he recommended a broader Social Security and a new medical insurance program to be paid for from a proposed increase of three billion dollars a year in payroll taxes.

The payroll tax increase reflects Mr. Truman's renewed request for enlargement of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance to include about 20,000,000 workers, including farmers and self-employed. He asked that the tax, raised at the beginning of this year from 1 to 1½ percent each for employes and employers, be boosted to 2 percent each on January 1, 1951.

Urges Tax On $4800

Furthermore, he urged that it aply to the first $4800 of earned income, rather than to the first $3000 as at present.

This would provide an increase of from 70 to 80 percent in benefits, and would cover, the President said, about 85 percent of employed people.

The total receipts, if the new tax were enacted, would be about five billion dollars annually, or double the present $2,500,000,000.

The other half-billion-dollar payroll tax increase demanded by Mr. Truman would go to begin the financing of his controversial medical insurance program. It would come from a payroll tax of one fourth of 1 percent each on employes and emplorers.

It has been generally predicted that Congress will refuse outright to enact the medical insurance program this session, and will give the President only part of the Old-age and Survivors' Insurance increase he asked for.

Boosts From Trust Fund

The increased outlays for old-age and health insurance would come from special trust funds built up from the payroll taxes. In addition, the budget proposed yesterday contemplates increased outlays for other welfare purposes, from general funds, of about one billion dollars over current levels.

The estimate is necessarily rough-and-ready. It was derived by totaling the proposed expenditures for the four following, and arbitrarily selected, general categories of expenses:

Social welfare, health and security; housing and community development; education and general research, and labor.

It can be argued that to obtain a fair picture of "welfare" expenses, it would be proper to include also the category of veterans' services and benefits. If this program, which will decline by 825 million dollars in fiscal 1951 had been included, the total increase in welfare costs would be only about 200 million dollars.

For the four categories selected, the proposed 1951 expenditure is $4,720,000,000, as compared with an estimated cost of $3,647,000,000 in the current fiscal year. The increases come in part from expansion of existing programs, and in part from proposed new projects.

Breakdown of Requests

In the first classification, social welfare, health and security, the proposed increase is about 407 million dollars. Of this, 271 million dollars would be for new programs, principally in the form of grants to the States.

These would include 200 million dollars for aid to all the needy, rather than just the needy aged, blind, and children; and 62 million dollars for new programs of aid to medical education, local health services and school health services.

In the second category, housing and community development, a 323 million dollar increase includes 80 million dollars in loans to start Mr. Truman's new housing programs for middle-income home-building and cooperative housing construction. Most of the expenditures in this whole category, if should be noted, are lending—not grant—transactions.

The increase of 309 million dollars for education and general research is almost entirely accounted for by proposed new legislation for aid to States in elementary and secondary education.

The major increase proposed for labor expenses is additional money for administration, paid by the Federal Government, of State operation of public employment offices and unemployment insurance.

Mr. Truman also restated his demand for higher Federal standards that State governments must meet to qualify for the unemployment compensation program. He asked for increased coverage, payments lasting for at least 26 weeks of joblessness and benefits of 50 percent of previous wages up to $30 a week for a single person and $42 for a worker with three dependents.

Funds Asked to Find Way to Use Salt Water

President Truman yesterday asked Congress to vote funds "to find means for transforming salt water into fresh water in large volume at economical costs."

"Experience in recent years," Mr. Truman said, apparently with New York's current experience in mind, "has shown that it may not be possible to meet the sho-tages of water, which are a threat in some areas, through our extensive water-resource programs."

Mr. Truman also reported to Congress that he had set up by executive order a Water Resources Policy Commission to study the country's water problems. He appointed Leland Olds, who failed of confirmation for reappointment to the Federal Power Commission, to the new board.

Half-Billion Saving Is Foreseen in Crop Cuts

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Acreage reductions in major crops are going to save more than half a billion dollars in price supports for farm products next year, President Truman optimistically told Congress yesterday.

In his budget message, Mr. Truman estimated that the Commodity Credit Corporation, which operates the price-support program, will cost only 952 million dollars in the year beginning July 1. That is 581 million dollars less than the 1533 million CCC is expected to cost this year.

This decline in 1951, Mr. Truman said, is possible "because of the expected effects of acreage allotments and marketing quotas on the 1950 crops.

Estimates Highly Tentative

"Estimates for price-support expenditures are, of course, highly tentative," he added, "since the actual expenditures depend upon many factors which cannot be accurately forecast, such as the volume of exports, the rate of domestic consumption, and the influence of insects and weather conditions on yields.

"The operation of price supports has resulted in the accumulation of large inventories, particularly of cotton, wheat, and corn. These commodity inventories represent assets which provide insurance against possible crop shortages in future years."

At the same time, Mr. Truman is asking that CCC be granted additional borrowing authority of two billion dollars—raising its total borrowing authorization to 6475 million dollars.

Another apparent reduction—although only a bookkeeping one—is shown in the request for the Farmers' Home Administration. Prior to this year, FHA loans to farmers were financed from appropriated funds. All loans were shown as expenditures. Collections went directly to the Treasury.

Financed by Borowing

This year and next FHA loan programs will be financed by borrowing from the Treasury. Repayments will be credited to FHA. Thus expenditures will reflect actual cost of operations. Yesterday's budget sought 35 million dollars in appropriations and borrowing authority for 110 million. In 1949 the total was 123 million.

Much of the estimated savings the Administration expects from CCC price-support operations will be spent in increased appropriations for other agencies of the Agriculture Department.

Although the CCC budget is cut 581 million dollars, the over-all reduction for the department is only 465 million under this year.

President Truman raised the total for Rural Electrification Administration to 436 million dollars, of which 50 million is to be spent on the rural telephone loan program voted last sesson by Congress. The estimated expenditures of REA in 1950 are 362 million dollars.

Mr. Truman also raised the amount for the soil conservation operations. "Expenditures for the Soil Conservation Service and for flood-control work," he said, "are expected to increase from 64 million dollars in 1950 to 68 million in 1951.

Estimates Increase

Expenditures for the conservation and USE program and for administering acreage allotments and marketing quotas are estimated to be 314 million in 1951, compared with 285 in 1950 and 182 million in 1949."

By the end of 1951, Mr. Truman predicted, 90 percent of the Nation's farms will be in organized soil conservation districts.

The International Wheat Agreement will cost 76 million dollars in 1951, the message predicted, as contrasted with 82 million dollars in the present year. Operation of the Sugar Act, set up to protect domestic cane and beet sugar producers, will cost 69 million as against 63 million this year and 56 million in 1949.

Separated from the Agriculture Department list is an increased appropriation asked for the Forest Service—an agency of Agriculture. Instead, FS is included in Forest Resources under Natural Resources.

The request is for 82 million dollars against 76 million this year and 63 million in 1949.

Record D. C. Budget Presented in House

Today's episode in the District budget serial is a "came the dawn" sequel to some years of financial darkness.

District officials used to sing the blues about going in the red. They always said they were scraping the bottom of the barrel for money, always in the dark about where the money would come from until Congress passed the sales tax.

Yesterday the District Commissioners presented Congress a record $119,124,875 balanced budget for the period July 1, 1950, through June 30, 1951. The 1951 budget plan is written all in black, no trace of red ink, no calls for new taxes. There's even a surplus—some six million by June 30, 1950, shrinking to about two million by June 30, 1951. And another million is set aside for later budget additions.

. . . A balanced budget!

. . . New schools a-coming

. . . Thanks to 5-day week

The budget assumes a continued 12-million-dollar Federal payment to the District.

The budget is big stuff—double the one that took Washington through the first year America was in World War II; nearly four times the low budget of the depression 30s. Payrolls will use 63 million, more than half the total.

It offers big promises—a 5-day work-week for fireman; an $18,878,775 outlay for public improvements; a strong spurt in school and institutional, construction, plus big street, sewer and water building plans.

For all its size, the budget has felt the heavy hand of economy. The Commissioners chopped away $19,859,525 in spending demands made by agency heads. Of this cut, about 14.5 million was in proposed public improvements, and most of the rest in personnel.

The new budget calls for 641 new District jobs, cut of 1781 asked. Health officials, seeking a 60 percent budget increase, were knocked back below current spending levels, and welfare services, too, were trimmed below what their officials called necessary.

Up Five Million

In round numbers, the budget is about five million more than the amount being spent this year, of which four million was a back pay bill for city employes to cover the last fiscal year. Total spending now estimated as chargeable to the current year is about 110 million. Of this 103 million has been appropriated. About seven million is yet to be obtained by new appropriations.

That six million surplus for the current year is a by-product of windfalls and miscalculations.

On the windfall side was an unexpectedly large inheritance tax return which coupled with the District share of the Federal fine against the United Mine Workers and John L. Lewis, gave the District close to 2.5 million.

On the miscalculation side, sales tax revenues are exceeding earlier estimates by about a million; real estate tax returns are up a million, and other property taxes another million over earlier estimates. Finally, the bill for the 1949 back-pay boost amounted to about four rather than an expected five million.

District budget officials emphasized the surplus is a will-o-the-wisp when placed beside congressional mandates to boost the rate of public construction for schools and other agencies. They said some surplus is needed to assure a steady rate of capital outlay—particularly since the District no longer has any of the 10 million-dollar public works fund saved during the war and spent since.

Public improvements for Washington and nearby areas figure both in the District and Federal budgets.

In the District budget there is the $18,878,775 appropriation for capital outlay for the next fiscal year—plus $8,732,150 in contract authorizations. (These amount to (1) a stated cost limit on projects for which new appropriations are being made; (2) authority for the Commissioners to contract for the work; and (3) a promise that necessary later appropriations will be made to cover the full contracts.)

Biggest building boom provided by the budget is for schools. Proposed appropriations total 5.4 million, double this year's level, and some 3.6 million more is provided in contract authorizations.

Main funds for school construction are:

Bunker Hill, Davis, and Keane elemen-

Truman Seeking Completion Of Baltimore-D. C. Parkway

President Truman plugged for completion of the Baltimore-Washington Parkway in his budget message to Congress yesterday.

He called attention to pending legislation in the Senate and House which would authorize Federal funds to complete the long-delayed super roadway from the District line to Fort Meade, Md.

"About 15 million dollars will be required to complete the parkway," said the President," of which three million dollars will be included in the budget as an estimated 1951 supplemental appropriation."

The State of Maryland is constructing the 13-mile stretch from Baltimore to Fort Meade and Federal aid is sought to construct the 18-mile section from there to the District.

Representative George Fallon (D., Md.), chairman of the House Public Works subcommittee on roads, said he will call early hearings on the enabling parkway legislation to clear the way for the three million dollars appropriation at a later date.

tary schools—to each a $300,000 fund for 8-room additions, under varying cost limits.

For a new Negro junior high school near Douglas pl. and Pomeroy rd. se., $200,000 to start the work; with total price of the building fixed at $2,050,000 plus another $50,000 to buy the site.

Three other major expansions of Negro junior high school facilities are covered by (1) a $900,000 fund to start a $1,870,000 Terrell replacement building at 1st and Pierce nw. and (2) a $200,000 fund to start a $380,000 addition to Francis, including cafeteria and gymnasium and (3) $130,000 for a new site near 6th and O nw. for a building to replace Shaw.

For major developments of Negro high school facilities the budget gives (1) $1,500,000 for continuing Springarn construction at 24th and Benning, ne. (2) $75,000 to finish planning a replacement for Armstrong, (3) and $200,000 for more land at Dunbar for a new stadium.

Other school projects for which funds were included are: (1) $20,000 to plan a 16-room replacement of Seaton Elementary school near 3d and I sts. nw.; (2) $35,000 to finish the second floor of Burdick Vocational; (3) $79,000 to finish second floor of Stowe and (4) $70,000 for alterations of Central High.

Three other site purchase funds were in the budget—residue from a request by school officials for 19 new sites, nine for play and 10 for buildings. The funds left were $40,000 for Anacostia High play space, $30,000 for Tyler play space, and $40,000 for a new white elementary site near Mississippi ave. and Stanton rd. se.

Another $403,000 is for furnishing and equipping schools. $200,000 of it for Spingarn. A program to eliminate fire hazards in older buildings to be started with a $325,000 fund. A $21,000 item to remodel McKinley gymnasium for inter-high basketball games is in the budget.

No money was granted for the proposed replacement of Hine Junior High.

Ten jobs proposed for giving driver-training instruction in all the high schools were eliminated; it leaves the program limited to vocational schools.

Other big items in the public improvements phase of the District budget:

Welfare institutions: $750,000 is asked to start a three-million-dollar 300-bed infirmary and separate laundry building at the Home for the Aged and Infirm; $500,000 to start a $1,240,000 remodeling of heat, sewer, water, electric facilities at District Children's Center, Laurel, Md.; and $38,000 to plan 1.6-million-dollar buildings for Industrial Home School at Laurel.

Streets and bridges: Building funds total five million from District, three million from Federal sources. Biggest project is new trans-Anacostia bridge. District planners want it at E. Capitol st.; Federal planners say Massachusetts ave. is better, but their final verdict may come this month. First-year bridge budget is $4,083,000, eventual cost from 6 to 12 million. The highway department withdrew plans for Washington Circle underpass, and Military Road underpass at 16th and Military road bridge over Rock Creek; the money will go instead mainly to paving.

Sewers and water—The $3,443,000 sewer construction program includes money for starting a long-range project to end Brightwood floods, and to start 2.1-million-dollar improvement of Blue Plains sewage treatment plant. For water improvements the budget carries $2,233,000—keeps the city on a pay-as-you-go approach to increasing water supply, but officials may ask separate legislation for borrowing funds to speed the work.

In the Federal building picture for the Washington area are these budget amounts:

A 10-million-dollar fund is asked to launch a 16-million-dollar overhauling of Capitol's electric light and power heating and cooling system. District officials, following Congress' lead, are asking $82,500 to convert District Building's electric and heating systems. Like the Capitol plan, the District building would get rid of antiquated direct current, and hook into PEPCO service. Building would be heated from U. S. Central Heating plant.

Medical Research

A $15,125,000 fund is planned for continuing construction of medical research facilities of the U. S. Public Health Service at Bethesda, Md. For St. Elizabeth's Hospital $1,812,000 in Federal funds is listed toward $5.5 million replacement of two badly deteriorated hospital buildings put up in 1890.

For the new Federal Courts Building here, the budget lists six million; for the new General Accounting Office Building, $15.3 million.

The budget said the courts building is going to cost $3,875,000 less than the author d limit. $18,665,000, and will be finished October 14, 1951. The 24.5-million-dollar GAO building is to be finished June 30, 1951.

A go-ahead on the proposed District American Red Cross building was called off, for fiscal 1951 at least, because of "delays" in finding an available site here. The message said designs for the two-million-dollar project have been substantially completed.

The budget calls for $1,994,000 in Federal funds for Howard University to carry on a large-scale building program, compared with nearly 5.7 million appropriated this year.

The building figures were reflected in the total Howard University budget—$4,675,800 for next year compared with $8,054,425 appropriated for this year. For Freedmen's Hospital, the budget gives an increase from $2,443,000 for this year to $2,631,000 for next.

In the important municipal services of education, welfare, health, and public protection, the 1951 District budget metes out varied treatment.

Expenses Higher

For the schools, operating expenses are boosted but $827,000 over this year's estimated level, with about $300,000 going for new teachers. The school board asked 134 new jobs, 99 were approved, and about two thirds of them are teaching positions. All the teachers are for Negro elementary schools, with 10 to open kindergartens.

The Commissioners eliminated 50 teaching positions in the white high schools by cutting $250,000 in funds available for salaries. Dropping enrollments in the secondary schools was given as the reason. Teachers now employed will not lose their jobs but as vacancies occur from retirements or resignations positions will not be filled.

Public libraries saw their budget requests halved to a total of $1,448,000, about $99,000 more than they will spend this year. They were given $30,000 to remodel Central's basement—and hire 10 new employes, three of them to operate a mobile library service.

The Commissioners turned down the requested funds for new library branches in Anacostia, Benning, and Cleveland Park, and new sites in Tenleytown and Congress Heights.

Similar cuts were made in proposed outlays for new recreation facilities. The Commissioners refused the funds for two new swimming pools, Randall for Negroes and Fort Reno for whites. With a budget of $1,698,000, the Recreation Board got one third of the ground improvement money and one third (16) of the employes (49) it asked. Funds were asked for four field houses, and funds were left to build one at Fort Stanton (Negro) and one at Langdon Park (white).

Health officials got a severe kicking around on their budget demands. They had asked 16 million, two thirds for hospitals, the rest for departmental operations. The budget plan sent to Congress gives the health setup $10,839,875. Operating funds are increased almost $700,000 over this year's level; capital outlay is cut back from $1,692,000 to $68,875, for three new elevators and an outside stairwell at Gallinger.

Shorn from this year's budget were these Health Department projects: a $925,000 Gallinger doctors' and internes' residence; a $285,000 expansion of surgical facilities at Gallinger; a $70,000 planning fund for a two-million-dollar polyclinic building at Gallinger; a $750,000 northwest health center; and $450,000 in buildings a Glenn Dale Sanatorium. The Health Department had asked funds for 881 new jobs; the commission approved 133, 64 at Gallinger, 52 at Glenn Dale, the rest in the department.

For welfare services, the commissioners granted slender increases, far short of the levels proposed by welfare officials. For general relief there is a $115,000 increase. Against that, officials eye an expected 10 percent hike in case loads, and worry about present level of payments being 12 percent under 1946 standard. They foresee increase in child welfare cases, scarcely covered by a $54,000 fund boost. The budget adds 13 persons to public assistance staff by the budget, to shorten the present six-week waiting period. The budget also provides 15 more employes at Industrial Home School to open the annex; 18 more at the Home for the Aged and Infirm and 11 more at the District Training School, to correct what officials said were "serious" personnel shortages. Biggest single slice of the welfare budget, $8,105,000, goes to pay for indigent District patients in St. Elizabeths while the Federal budget gives the hospital an additional $4,381,000.

Officials said the St. Elizabeths item, increased recently by $400,000, was the main source of the discrepancy between the final District budget figure and the $118,855,975 published Friday by The Washington Post.

In the public protection agencies, the big budget boost was for firemen—approval by the Commissioners to hire 146 more men, enough to put the five-day week into effect. It would give the men a 70-hour-a-week night trick, 50-hour-a-week day trick (corresponding figures now are 84 at night and 60 in the day shift). The shorter work week, under law, would take effect 180 days after necessary funds were provided by Congresss. New jobs proposed are a deputy chief, four battalion chiefs, 35 sergeants and 106 privates. The budget allows promotion of Deputy Fire Marshall Roy Warfield from captain to battalion chief. No money was allowed for a new engine house near the eastern corner of the District.

Police budget carries 44 of 83 requested new positions including 30 privates, enough to boost authorized strength to 1998, compared with present actual strength of 1894. Also included is $80,000 to convert police radio to FM in line with FCC order. The Commissioners refused funds to buy a site for a new Women's Bureau and House of Detention, for promoting 10 men, and for a $3500 sedan for visiting dignitaries. For the Department of Correction, a budget of $3,505,500, up about $350,000 over present levels, helps cover added expense of more prisoners going to Federal cells at local expense for commission of serious crimes. It also provides $104,000 for starting new control center building at Lorton, $3500 to buy 20 more farming acres and $15,000 for fencing along Shirley Highway.

Pointing out that the airport is operated by the Administration to provide air terminal facilities for the Nation's Capital "as a model for airport management," the message said:

"No change in program level is proposed, but purchase of an improved-type crash truck is planned."

The airport budget request also included funds to build an overpass from the terminal to U. S. highway No. 1.

Ear-Biting Case Continued to Friday

A mayhem case, in which Howard Johnson, 26, of 1515 Swann st. nw., is accused of biting off the ear of another man, was continued yesterday to Friday after the victim failed to appear in Municipal Court. Judge Armond W. Scott ordered an attachment issued for Vincent Suber, 36, of 1319 S st. nw., to assure his appearance in court on that day. Suber's ear was sewed back in place at Freedmen's Hospital Saturday night, shortly after he lost it in a fight with Johnson.

New Church Gets Approval

five years the church raised $783,000 in cash and pledges, Judge Samuel E. Whitaker of the United States Court of Claims, chairman of the building committee, said.

Mr. Bridge told members of the Presbytery that the Rev. George M. Docherty of Aberdeen, Scotland, pastor-elect, saw plans for the new building last summer and approves them.

Mr. Docherty, who will succeed the late Rev. Dr. Peter Marshall under whose leadership the plans were first made, is expected to begin his work as pastor late in March.

The building will contain a sanctuary seating 1500 and an assembly room seating 400, expanded Sunday school space, a kitchen and dining room.

Space in the historic building has been inadequate several years. Many worshipers have had to listen to services over a public address system in auxiliary rooms.

High Court Denies Review, Kills Maryland Gag on Press

imply approval or disapproval" of the lower court's action.

2. The denial "simply means that fewer than four members of the court deemed it desirable to review a decision of the lower court as a matter of 'sound judicial discretion'." The court's rule on reviews is that they are not a matter of right but of the court's "sound judicial discretion" to be granted "only when there are special and important reasons therefor."

Calls Issues Basic

3. Nonetheless, the issues in the Baltimore gag case "bear on some of the basic problems of a democratic society," particularly on the conflict between freedom of the press, properly conceived," and "safeguards for the fair adminisration of criminal justice." (the Baltimore rule was designed to protect accused persons from what is sometimes called "trial by newspaper.") Frankfurter said "respect for both of these indispensable elements of our constitutional system presents some of the most difficult and delicate problems for adjudication . . ."

4. The court, in denying the appeal, is not to be considered to be passing on the limits which the 14th amendment to the Constitution puts on the States "to safeguard the fair administration of criminal justice by jury trial from mutilation or distortion by extraneous influences."

Frankfurter included citations from 17 English cases involving crime news printed in British newspapers "merely for the purpose of indicating the kind of questions that would have to be faced were we called upon to pass on" that limitation imposed by the 14th amendment.

The net result of Frankfurter's opinion was to kill the Baltimore gag and at the same time to raise the judicial warning that this had no effect on any other similar gag rule, should any appear anywhere else in the United States or if the Baltimore rule were to be rewritten in the light of the Maryland court decision.

Involved in the gag case were Baltimore radio stations WFBR, WCMB and WITH and newscaster James P. Connolly. They had been held in contempt of court for broadcasts about a confession given by Eugene H. James.

He was indicted for killing both 11-year-old Carol Bardwell of Washington in Rock Creek Park and an 11-year-old Baltimore girl nine days later in Baltimore. He was tried, convicted and hanged for the second killing. The contempt fines ranged from $100 to $500.

The gag rule, known as Rule 904 of the Baltimore City supreme Court bench, prohibited any official statement or the pretrial publication of any such statement "relative to the conduct of the accused, statements or admissions by the accused, or other matters bearing upon the issues to be tried."

But the Maryland appeals court threw out the convictions and said the curb was "in the nature of censorship." The court added that "trials cannot be held in a vacuum hermetically sealed against rumor and report. If a mere disclosure of the general nature of the evidence relied on would vitiate a subsequent trial, few verdicts could stand."

Maryland asked a Supreme Court review on the grounds the State court misconstrued past Supreme Court decisions. Normally a review is granted if four—sometimes three—justices ask it.

Frankfurter cited numerous reasons, many legal and technical, why an appeal may be denied. Then he added: "Wise adjudication has its own time for ripening." This could be a way of saying the Baltimore case was not a good one on which to base a review of the conflict between a free press and a fair trial.

Warehouse Fire

Fire broke out yesterday afternoon in the walls behind a furnace in a four-story brick house at 1215 K st. nw. The building is used as a warehouse for the George C. Schaeffer, Inc., florist shop, 900 14th st. nw. Heavy smoke brought large downtown crowds and 12 pieces of equipment to the scene. No damage estimate was immediately available.

Product From Other States Makes Gas Firm Subject to FPC, Supreme Court Declares

The Supreme Court held yesterday, 5-to-2, that an Ohio gas firm is subject to the Federal Power Commission though it operates wholly within the Buckeye State.

Justice Black said the continuous flow of gas from other States into the lines of the East Ohio Gas Co. constitutes interstate commerce as established by previous court decisions. But Justice Jackson, in a dissent joined by Justice Frankfurter, said the FPC was asking the court "not to fill a gap in the State's power to regulate, for there is none, but to create a gap to make room for Federal power."

Agreeing with Black were Chief Justice Vinson and Justices Reed, Clark and Minton. Justices Douglas and Burton took no part in the case. Burton is a former Cleveland mayor.

The court also agreed to hear two of five National Labor Relations Board cases growing out of the NLRB's complaint that it hasn't been getting a fair deal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Southern States.

Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman had joined the NLRB in declaring the Circuit Court had displayed a "pattern of denial" in handling Labor Board cases. The high court refused to grant Perlman's request for enforcement orders in the cases but agreed to hear arguments about two of the five.

The court agreed to determine whether a lower court acted properly in throwing out an antitrust suit because the Government refused to disclose FBI files in the case. The Justice Department contends the lower court ruling, if it stands, would seriously interfere with antitrust enforcement. The case involves oil firms in Louisiana.

The court upheld, without an opinion, the right of a Philadelphia man to tell his wife in a letter — in short Anglo-Saxon words—he knew she was misbehaving with other men. The wife considered the letter indecent and turned it over to postal authorities. The husband was convicted and began serving a year and a day last March.

But the Supreme Court yesterday reversed the Court of Appeals which had upheld the sentence.

Red Charges Are Denied By Flaxer

Harris & Ewing

ABRAM FLAXER
. . . Barred temporarily

By the United Press

President Abram Flaxer of the United Public Workers (CIO) yesterday flatly denied that the union follows the Communist line and asserted that a CIO hearing on the charge was "framed up."

Flaxer said the hearing, which opened yesterday, was based on "false and phoney" charges and was intended to cover up the "CIO's own inept leadership."

Flaxer also told newsmen after the opening session of the hearings, "Of course I deny I'm a Communist." He once refused to answer the question when a congressional committee asked it.

The hearing is the third of a series scheduled to determine whether 10 left-wing unions should be thrown out of the national CIO for allegedly following the Communist line.

A three-man committee of right-wing CIO unions is hearing the charges, brought by William Steinberg, president of the American Radio Association.

Steinberg told the committee, headed by Emil Rieve of the textile workers, that the UPW "diligently followed every twist and turn of the Communist party line" from its organization in 1946 to the present.

Steinberg asserted that the UPW's predecessor union, the State, county and municipal workers, supported Russian policy before World War II. He said the UPW has continued the same pro-Soviet course.

The UPW had no chance to study the exhibits in advance, he said, and would ask for a recess of the hearing to organize a rebuttal.

Charges CIO is 'Covering Up'

The UPW will "prove beyond a shadow of a doubt" that the CIO has no case, Flaxer said.

Flaxer declared that one purpose of the charges against the UPW is to "cover up" CIO leaders' "inability to lead the rank and file and obtain better wages and hours."

He said the CIO has settled for too little in recent contracts and declared that leaders "depend too much on White House favors."

The hearing committee barred all but Flaxer and three other national UPW officers out of a group of 200 that tried to enter. Flaxer himself was barred from the meeting for awhile.

The others in the contingent were local officers from New York, Philadelphia and Midwestern cities.

Flaxer and the other officers reported to the group after the hearing recessed at 5 p. m.

Miner's Gas Heat In Home Causes Loss of Coal Job

Collinsville, Ill., Jan. 9 (U.P.).—A 56-year-old coal miner was sent home from his job today in a dispute involving his violation of a union by-laws by installing gas heating in his new house.

Charles Waichekauskas, who has mined coal for 37 years, is looking for another job, according to his wife, who added that one of his bosses at the Lumaghi Coal Co. told him: "The men won't work with you. It would be better if you went home."

Local 3 of the Progressive Mine Workers' Union has a by-law which imposes a two-year suspension on any member using anything in his home but coal or wood heat.

He put gas heat in his new home because it provided more comfort for their 21-year-old adopted son, Edward, who was stricken six years ago with rheumatic fever, Mrs. Waichekauskas said.

Faye Files Divorce Suit

Cuernavaca, Mexico, Jan. 9 (U.P.). Actress Faye Emerson filed suit today for a speedy Mexican divorce from Elliott Roosevelt on grounds of mental cruelty. Her lawyer, Francisco Lopez Figueroa, said a property settlement had been agreed upon.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.

If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief — help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

State Argues Dials Save C. & P. Money

LAFF-A-DAY

"I COULDN'T quit the game at 12 o'clock and come home—because there wasn't any home to come to. I'd lost it, and I didn't win it back until a half hour ago!"

Baltimore, Jan. 9 (AP).—The State argued today that the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. is saving a lot of money by putting in dial systems to replace operators.

It was one of the contentions advanced in opposition to a rate increase asked by the company.

Emmett D. Talbot, a consuling engineer, told the Public Service Commission that the dial conversion in one Baltimore exchange was saving the company $192,940 a year.

E. Edward MacLean, the commission's chief auditor, presented figures estimating the company had saved $1,206,348 as the result of five other conversions.

MacLean also estimated that had the company been charging the proposed rates it would have earned $7,689,845 in the year ended last September 30, or 70.3 percent on its investment.

Earlier, State Engineer John B. Funk said the company has some of its building done on a cost-plus basis and argued this is usually more expensive than asking for competitive bids. He also declared that building costs have gone down 10 to 15 percent since the company made the estimates on which it has asked its plea for higher rates.

Presentation of the three witnesses wound up the State's case against the proposed rate increases.

If the public service commission allows the new permanent rates, telephone bills throughout Maryland will go up about two million dollars a year.

Bridges Case Star Witness Admits Lying

San Francisco, Jan. 9. (AP).—Lawrence Seton Ross, a key prosecution witness in the Harry Bridges perjury trial, abandoned a 30-year masquerade today.

Quoting from the Bible, the 46-year-old managing editor of the Cotton Trade Journal in Memphis and self-styled former Communist admitted from the witness stand that he had lied about his name, his origin and his schooling. He owned up to other misstatements as well.

His real name, he said, was Rosenstein. He was born, not in Kentucky, but in West Poland. With his mother, sister and brother, he followed his father, a garment worker, to this country in 1910.

Says Rest Is True

He insisted, however, everything he had said about Bridges was true.

The Australian-born longshore leader is charged with perjury in denying, in obtaining U. S. citizenship in 1945, that he was or ever had been a member of the Communist Party.

Ross testified he had seen Bridges at three meetings open to Communists only; and that, as "Comrade Rossi," the defendant had been elected to the party's high command—the national central committee—in New York in 1936.

James MacInnis of the Bridges legal staff said out of court that the defense "of course" will seek a perjury indictment against Ross.

"Frankly, however," he added, "we do not have much expectation that the Government will present the case to the grand jury."

Testimony to Stand

Ross' "statement of correction and revision," they said, did not affect material facts or his testimony regarding Bridges.

The witness told the judge and jury that he concluded Friday night he would have to "face the facts."

"I asked for help from a higher judge than presides in this court, and I had the answer," he said, and he quoted a Bible passage: "Commit thy works unto the Lord and He shall establish thy thoughts."

Ross presumably finished his testimony Friday. He wanted to leave for Memphis. Objections came from MacInnis, who hinted he was digging into the witness' identity. Shown a telegram by MacInnis, United States District Judge George B. Harris ordered Ross to remain.

Ross Will Keep Job, Journal Editor Says

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 9 (AP).—Francis C. Hickman, editor and publisher of the Cotton Trade Journal, today said "we are all behind Seton Ross and he will continue indefinitely as managing editor of this publication."

Dentistry Ruled As Profession In Montgomery

Dentistry has been legally determined to be a profession and not a "trade or business" in Montgomery County.

This question was answered by Judge Stedman Prescott in Montgomery County Circuit Court when he dismissed a suit to bar a Silver Spring dentist from maintaining an office at his home in a neighborhood convenanted to prevent its use for "trade or business."

The dentist, Dr. Louis M. Cuvillier, was sued by two neighbor families to refrain from converting his basement garage at 720 Dale dr., Silver Spring, into an office.

better get together and settle" their dispute "very shortly."

Lucas said this on leaving a White House conference, but he added that the coal controversy was not discussed in the meeting of Administration leaders with Mr. Truman.

"Both the coal operators and Lewis are at fault," Lucas said.

The decision of Midwestern Republican lawmakers to push a resolution through Congress, calling on the President to treat the situation as an emergency, came after a House member spoke of impeachment action against Mr. Truman.

Representtive Mason (R., Ill.) said impeachment proceedings are Congress' "only remedy" in trying to step up coal production.

The GOP Midwestern Congress members conferred with a group of retail coal dealers from Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Michigan. The dealers had bitter complaints that coal supplies have run extremely low and there is real suffering from freezing weather in some areas.

John Hackett, president of the Illinois Fuel Merchants Association, told the legislators: "Believe me, we are going to have to do something. It's a strike against the poor man."

Lewis took a different view. His statement, failing to mention his 15-cent royalty increase demand, said the "only issue current in the coal industry" is his demand for increasing miners' wages from $14.05 to $15 a day. Lewis asked:

"Should the machinery of the State and the money of its citizens be now utilized to oppress the mine workers and cripple their union, merely to save the prosperous coal operators 95 cents per day"

Lewis said "an increasing number of coal companies" are accepting his wage-royalty terms. He said operators have raised coal prices since the old contract expired last July 1 by more than the sum needed to pay for his demands.

Ohio Speech Is Easiest Understood, Expert Says

New York, Jan. 9 (NYHT).—The Buckeyes of Ohio speak the most easily understood dialect in the English language, Dr. James Bender, National Broadcasting Co. speech expert, told the Ohio Society tonight.

In Ohio, he said the letter "R" is pronounced when it occurs, and there is nothing fancy about it. Furthermore, words aren't run together as they are in other parts of this country and in England.

Charlotte Housing Unit Drops Race Restriction

By The Associated Press

The city of Charlotte, N. C., has stricken references to racial segregation from its application for low-rent public housing and has been allotted 200 additional units.

The Public Housing Administration disclosed this yesterday after Representative Hamilton C. Jones (D., N. C.), said the agency had informed him it was increasing the Charlotte allotment from 400 to 600 units.

PHA notified the Charlotte Housing Authority several weeks ago its request for a preliminary loan for planning 400 units for non-white families could not be presented to the White House because of racial restrictions proposed in the application.

Dispute on Formosa Again Ties Up Senate

Republican appeals to save Formosa from the Communists again tied up the Senate for hours yesterday, and brought renewed Administration warnings that sending American troops there might bring on a new world war.

Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.) insisted he was not calling for "forceful" occupation of the island. Instead he proposed a "peaceful and friendly" agreement with the Chinese Nationalist authorities to set up a joint political authority among the United States, the Nationalists and the Formosans themselves.

The idea brought ridicule from Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) of the Foreign Relations Committee, who branded the Republican appeals as "really an assault on the President of the United States and the Secretary of State."

"How are you going to occupy Formosa without an army?" Connally demanded, "You can't occupy it with a few tourisss or with two or three Senators. You can't whip the Communists with wind.

"Where is the Senator who wants to send an army?" Connally persisted. When he heard no answer, he said he would not vote to send "a single American boy with a gun in his hand to die in the Formosa jungle."

He also taunted the Republicans for trying to discover the authorship of the State Department's confidential guidance message of December 23, which sought to prepare American officials abroad for the fall of Formosa to the Communists.

Both Connally and Majority Leader Scott Lucas (D., Ill.) charged that someone in General Douglas MacArthur's headquarters had "leaked" the document, and Lucas said whoever did it "ought to take off his uniform."

For most of the time the attack was carried on by Smith and by three fellow-Republican Senators—William F. Knowland (Calif.), Bourke B. Hickenlooper (Iowa) and Homer Ferguson (Mich.).

Ferguson had gone to the White House in the morning to discuss the Formosa situation with President Truman and Secretary Acheson. He emerged telling reporters that his views on China had not changed but "I don't want to say I wasn't enlightened."

He said he was convinced the United States had not "abandoned" Formosa, and that the United States could still give "unofficial and volunteer" military advice to the Chinese Nationalists.

ton, rubber and caustic soda. Another fire broke out on the after deck.

At intervals the Flying Arrow sounded three short blasts on her whistle.

"That is the international signal, 'my engines are going full astern,'" explained Captain Jones, "but that did not stop them from firing." He ordered a radio call for aid.

Captain Jones, a determined, 246-pounder from Chicago, estimated the number of shell hits at 30 to 40. He said 14 were in the after steering-gear house. Some, 2 to 4 inches in diameter, were only 4 inches above the waterline. One machine-gun bullet pierced the American flag flying on the taffrail.

There was no estimate of the size of the shells that penetrated the hull. Passengers picked up numerous shell fragments from the decks as souvenirs.

(A Nationalist navy spokesman in Taipei, Formosa, said the shelling was done by the gunboat, Wuling. Such a ship usually is armed with no more than 3-inch guns, plus smaller 6-pounders and machine guns.)

The Flying Arrow venture began early Saturday morning, January 7, when this freighter sailed from Hongkong with an assorted 10-million-dollar cargo. Bales of cotton were piled high around the superstructure for protection.

Fearful of the mines the Nationalists said had been planted, 11 of the crew were given special State Department permission to sign off. British and other nationalities replaced them.

As the Flying Arrow passed through the Formosa Strait Sunday morning, two Nationalist destroyer-escorts began trailing her. (Whether these ships were shaken off during the night was not clear.)

"They blinkered that mines were being laid," and "You must not now enter," Captain Jones translated the flashes.

sembly had rescinded its 1946 resolution.

"I believe," he said, "that we can afford to wait for such clearance. Also, I believe that we should coordinate our action with our allies among those nations which live in proximity with Spain.

"We should not act precipitately and alone in dealing with the Spanish issue. We should not act in such a way as to weaken in the slightest degree our unity with the nations with which we have entered into great commitments."

The United States should also make it clear to the world, "and to Spain in particular," he said, that sending an ambassador would not connote moral approval of the Franco regime.

He said it was irrelevant to argue, as visiting Congressmen have done, that Franco was honest, devout and charming; they might have said the same of Mussolini, Hitler and Stalin. The fact was, he said, that Spain was an authoritarian country which denied political liberty and discriminated against religious minorities.

"Its government," he declared, is made, not in precise conformity with the examples of its Axis sponsors, but certainly in their general image."

He also blamed Spain for her "prohibitive" exchange rate, her restrictions on foreign capital, and her many "harassments" of foreign investors. And he added that Spain was not only responsible for her economic weakness but for her exclusion from the Marshall Plan, the North Atlantic Pact and the military assistance program.

"Simply to be anti-Communist is not enough," he said, "to qualify for participation in these great designs . . . The opportunity for assistance on the basis of self-help, mutual assistance, collaboration among free nations, and the preservation of free institutions has never been denied Spain. It is Spain that in the first instance has chosen to walk alone."

Chinese Reds Accept Nod From Britain

London, Jan. 9 (U.P.).—The Peiping radio announced tonight that the Chinese Communist government had accepted Britain's recognition of its regime and had agreed to establish diplomatic relations.

It was announced in New Delhi also that the Peiping regime had accepted India's offer of recognition—after more than a week's delay.

The Commusint New China News Agency here announced it had recorded the following broadcast from Peiping:

"Chinese Communist Foreign Minister Chou En-lai announced he was willing to establish diplomatic relations with Great Britain on a basis of equality, mutual benefit and respect for territory and sovereignty."

The promise to respect territory and sovereignty was regarded as important here, because it was interpreted as an implied promise that the Communists would not interfere with British Hongkong.

Denmark and Israel followed Britain's lead today and announced their recognition of the Communists.

Chinese Soldiers Fail In British Flag Slur

Taipei, Formosa, Jan. 9 (AP).—Chinese soldiers, angry over British recognition of the Chinese Communist government, tried yesterday to haul down the British flag from the consulate at Tansui, a seacoast town northwest of Tapei.

They did not succeed. Consul Edward Briggs kept the three armed soldiers busy talking until Nationalist military police arrived. They persuaded the trio to leave the British compound.

Briggs said signs had been painted on the compound walls. One of them called the consulate the "British Zoo." Another said "Expel the British beasts."

Clapp Reports On Mid East

nor a gradual alteration of climate, is responsible for the change. The cause of decline is betrayed by the traces of the past.

"In Syria, in Jordan and in southern Palestine can still be seen ruins of one-time waterworks: Great cisterns dug out of the rock below the earth to treasure the spring rains, irrigation canals of mud and brick, once filled from the perennial rivers by primitive but effective water-wheels.

"Old-time wars destroyed these things. The land has dried up and the people have gone. Cisterns are silted up, springs filled in and fouled, irrigation works broken down. Yet the land remains, the rain still falls, the rivers flow. If the water be once more saved and spread upon the land, crops will grow again."

But, the report continued, "all cannot be done at once; a good living for the present population will not be achieved easily or quickly."

"The important first step is to begin—to break with the habits of inertia. The principle must be to start with reality, with things as they are; then, with the help of modern science and technical skill, to help the peoples of the Middle East to help themselves in rebuilding what they have lost and forgotten for a time but can still regain."

The report cited many obstacles to economic development in the Middle East—among them the dearth of local capital, the lack of technical skills and research, the effects of frontiers cutting across river basins.

Still, the Clapp mission predicted, the four proposed "pilot" projects could pave the way toward larger developments later. It sow good hope of success if there were peace in the Middle East, technical help from the West, and genuine self-help and cooperation on the part of the Middle Eastern countries themselves.

Russia Offers To Repatriate 2500 Japs

Tokyo, Jan. 9 (U.P.).—The Russians asked Gen. Douglas MacArthur today for a ship in which to send home 2500 Japanese war prisoners who had been held in Siberia since the end of the war.

Gen. Kuzma Derevyanko, Soviet member of the Allied Council here, asked MacArthur to make a ship available to call at Nahkodka, Siberia, January 18 for the prisoners, including 459 hospital cases.

There was some surprise here at Derevyanko's request.

Russia had said last year she would repatriate 95,000 war prisoners during 1949 and thus would complete the program of sending home the men captured in Manchuria during the few days Russia was in the Pacific war. The Russians actually sent home 94,973 men and it was assumed this completed the repatriation.

This left an estimated 376,000 prisoners unaccounted for.

against it, O'Dwyer said his plan would:

1. Provide "efficient and effective enforcement and a huge revenue that the State is not getting."

2. Keep betting honest since "the criminal element couldn't possibly engage in gambling because of supervision of the States licensing agency."

3. Save millions of dollars a year because "the burden of enforcement would be removed from the backs of taxpayers in every municipality."

"After 40 years in this city," O'Dwyer said, "I am satisfied that the public is interested in sports, not only from the standpoint of sports themselves but also from the pleasure they get from betting on sports.

"Almost every daily newspaper recognizes this interest and not only publishes entries, for example, in horse racing on local tracks, but all over the Nation."

Voting Records

Representative John W. Byrnes' bill to require publication of the voting record of every House member is one of those proposals on which, manifestly, there ought to be a record vote. Indeed, there ought to be a record vote on every important controversial issue that comes before the House. Installation of automatic electrical tabulating devices, as we have suggested in the past, would make this thoroughly feasible and would eliminate the objection that an undue amount of time might be consumed in the counting process.

All that Mr. Byrnes asks for, however, is that the constituents of a Congressman should be able to tell how he voted on those issues respecting which the House decided to put its members on record. At present, even this knowledge is exceedingly difficult to obtain. Researchers must work their way through thousands of pages of the Congressional Record to detect the stand of each of the 435 House members on each issue. Easy access to such information would be an important aid to the democratic process. And surely no Congressman whose conscience is clear would want to keep his official conduct concealed.

Acheson's First Year

Mr. Acheson when he appears before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee will be a year old as Secretary of State. The year has been an exacting one. Asia is the region that has provided him with his chief headache. His problem there is complicated by his loyalty to the war agreements on Asia which before the fall of China should have been disavowed. It was much more than a "quibble" to have raised such an issue. The President, in taking a stand on Formosa, repeated the statement in the Cairo declaration that Formosa had been "stolen" from China. Actually there was as little of a theft involved in the change from China to Japan in ownership of Formosa in 1895 as in the transfer to America of Spanish holdings in the Far East and the West Indies. And, legally, Formosa still belongs to Japan, even under the terms of the wartime agreements. As for Manchuria, the deal disposing of Manchurian rail and port concessions at the Yalta Conference was a flat repudiation of not only this country's historical anti-colonialism, but also of the pledge repeatedly entered into—and now reaffirmed by Secretary Acheson—of China's territorial integrity. However, our diplomacy has missed the bus in this respect, and Mr. Acheson intends to remain faithful to those harassing and hamstringing commitments.

The Asian headache is compounded by the confusion at home in dealing with Asia. There is a lack of any nonpartisan approach to Asia and a consequent Republican choice of China as a stick with which to beat the Administration. To many of the present-day sinogogues China is simply X, i. e. the occasion for the partisanship in foreign affairs which has been excluded in most other domains of foreign policy by interparty agreement and consultation. Perhaps the reason is that there has never been any body of ideas in the executive branch on which to develop any agreement. As it is, the Administration has hitherto allowed itself in its day-to-day diplomacy in Asia to be prey to fears of congressional reactions and intimidation. It has indeed bowed to Congress on more than one occasion on Asia. Military intervention on the side of Chiang Kai-shek, for instance, was a congressional policy; failure to protect American shipping in the China seas is an ignominous surrender to the Chiang-ites in Congress. By last week this deference to the Hill had covered policy in so much confusion that the Administration simply had to strike out and reestablish its constitutional initiative.

The whys and wherefores of last week's step will no doubt be aired at today's hearing. We hope Secretary Acheson, in sticking to his guns, will persaude the Senators of the diagnosis of the trouble in Asia which the State Department obviously entertains. We feel that this is the correct diagnosis. There is far more gray in Asia than black-or-white, and it is fatal to think of Asia in terms of Europe. A vast independence movement is engulfing Asia, and the object of policy should be to drive a wedge between authentic nationalism and aggressive communism. This is a job that is essentially diplomatic, requiring a pooling of American wisdom and effort, for Asia is going to be the problem of the century. A false step on America's part, a yielding to what Emerson calls "the hunger for sudden performance," and America will itself be sucked into the morass. The need is to mobilize all the skill and patience and prudence of which this country is capable in dealing with it.

Deficiteering

Deficits in good times are hardly a testimony to wise national housekeeping. Yet the President seems complacently to envisage one. The 5.1-billion-dollar deficit estimated on the basis of existing tax rates and the President's prospective spending program for the coming fiscal year beginning next July is only 400 million dollars lower than the record peacetime deficit forecast for the current year. An anticipated decline of about 460 million dollars in tax receipts, coupled with a reduction of about 860 million dollars in expenditures, accounts for the disappointingly slight shrinkage in the amount of the deficit. With a deficit of such size, hope of a balanced budget in the near future might as well be abandoned, unless Congress takes the initiative in cutting expenditures far below the levels that the President considers necessary to enable the Government properly to support "its extraordinary responsibilities" at home and abroad, or taxes are increased to cover the deficit.

As usual the President emphasizes the fact that a preponderant proportion of all Government outlays are for national defense, veterans' programs, foreign aid, and interest on the public debt. However, only a slight increase in defense outlays is projected and current expenditures have already been substantially reduced by Secretary Johnson's economy drive. Foreign-aid programs, moreover, will cost about 1.3 billion dollars less next year; veterans' services and benefits are expected to show a decline of 825 million dollars, and interest on the debt will be slightly lower.

Obviously the savings effected in these programs have been whittled down by increases in other expenditures (a billion-dollar increase is, in fact, contemplated), although most of these domestic programs are flexible and consequently afford leeway for budget pruning. Yet 600 million dollars more will be expended for civil public works in the next fiscal year, and public assistance grants to the States are scheduled to rise, along with expenditures for promotion of public health, private housing and aid to education.

Great stress is laid on the fact that recommendations for new appropriations and authority to incur new obligations are below 1950 levels. "This fact," the President says, is "significant as an indication that the downward trend in expenditures for 1950 to 1951 may be expected to continue." However, if he should decide later on that programs under way ought to be stepped up or that new projects are needed, he can always call for additional appropriations, or authorizations. Then, too, the social security programs, whose expansion is urged by the President, will ultimately prove extremely costly to the Government, although the greater part of their cost is currently being met by levying special payroll taxes. Moreover, we do not share the Chief Executive's confidence that a reduction of expenditures for agriculture lies ahead; that will depend on the kind of agricultural price support system that replaces the existing one.

How does the President propose to finance the deficit? That will be revealed when the tax program is made public. The recommended tax changes will, he says, produce some additional revenue in 1950-51, though the intake will be "substantially smaller than in subsequent years." In other words, he envisages some deficit, and leans by way of justification on the importance of the long-range effects of his spending recommendations on the country's economy. In our view the fiscal aim should be to produce a cash surplus in good times—good times being determined according to the employment criterion used by the Committee on Economic Development.

Dictatorship In Coal

The fact that Majority Leader Lucas and Senator Taft, author of the Taft-Hartley Act, are clamoring for action against John L. Lewis' three-day work decree for coal miners is a pretty good indication that the creeping paralysis of the coal industry is reaching serious proportions. If any other evidence is needed, it can be found in the ICC order for a one-third reduction in coal-burning railroad passenger service and in the demand of Middle Western coal dealers for more fuel. The stark fact is that one man—the dictator of the United Mine Workers—has brought about an emergency that is daily becoming more acute.

Senator Taft urges that the miners be enjoined from continuing their three-day week under the provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act. The law authorizes the President to seek an injunction whenever, in his opinion, "a threatened or actual strike or lockout" imperils the national health or safety. Mr. Taft believes that the refusal of the miners to work on two of the normal work days of each week can be regarded as a strike. That interpretation of the law might be sustained, but it is obvious in any event that its application would provide no solution for the dilemma that Mr. Lewis has created. The injunction could not last more than 80 days, whereas Mr. Lewis' challenge to American industry relying upon coal for fuel is a perennial affair. Moreover, a fact-finding board set up under the T-H Act couldn't even bring in a recommendation for a settlement of the long-standing dispute between the UMW and the operators.

Obviously, then, Congress has no reason to wait for invocation of the Taft-Hartley Act by the President before it looks into this phenomenon of industrial dictatorship. What the Nation must deal with is something far more serious than a temporary paralysis of industry and commerce because of a deadlock between employers and a powerful union. Mr. Lewis has asserted a one-man control over a great industry on which a vast number of factories, power plants, railroads and private homes are dependent for fuel. He says in effect that the industry must meet his terms or cease to operate. Even during the war he called four strikes to enforce his edicts, and since then he has repeatedly interrupted coal production for the same purpose. His conviction for contempt of court for extending a strike in defiance of judicial orders has not restrained him. Behind the immediate problem resulting from the shortage of coal, therefore, looms the question of what Congress is going to do about dictation of this sort.

There are some indications that Mr. Lewis is in the process of crippling the UMW which has given him his power, as he did back in 1927. Observers say that repeated strikes and the three-day week have produced acute resentment among the miners. The revolt against unionism is growing in the coal fields, and it is reported that one third of the coal now produced comes from non-UMW mines. The use of coal is also steadily shrinking, because of its high price and the unreliability of the supply. Does Congress intend to wait until this slow reaction brings disaster upon the UMW and its dictator? Or will it attempt to deal constructively with this monopolistic threat on the part of a ruthless czar operating within the ranks of labor?

If the President finds that a shortage of coal is imperiling the national health or safety, no doubt he will be forced to seek temporary relief. But congressional leaders ought to recognize that they have not yet given the President effective means of coping with the kind of situation that John Lewis has produced. There is a real danger that if such legislation should be passed, the President, in his present mood, would veto it. But that does not relieve Congress of its responsibility in the matter. Unless Congress is willing to let both industry and the rank and file of miners go through the wringer at the dictation of a tyrant, it had better take up the problem from a more basic viewpoint than the 80-day injunction.

Miss Franklin's Plight

One of the problems that ought to get attention at the Attorney General's crime conference next month is sharply pointed up by the plight of Bernice Franklin, the Government's star witness in the local gambling cases. After 10 months of giving testimony, being interviewed and subpenaed, Miss Franklin sought to quash a subpena requiring her to testify once more on the ground that she is "sick and tired and broke." The witness says that she has been fired from four jobs in the last month because of numerous subpenas. Her personal life has been aired in the newspapers. She says that she has been threatened, that her apartment has been ransacked, and that she is being followed. If this is to be the misfortune of witnesses who testify for the Government, law enforcement will be dangerously handicapped.

It is true that every citizen who gives evidence to a prosecutor assumes a certain degree of risk. That is one of the responsibilities of citizenship. Men and women who see crimes committed are under solemn obligation to communicate their knowledge to law-enforcement officers. Nothing the Government can do will wholly eliminate the inconvenience, the personal publicity, and the possible risk thus entailed. But the disadvantages of being a Government witness must certainly be minimized if citizens are to be encouraged to cooperate in the law-enforcement effort.

The first step that must be taken, in our opinion, is to assure witnesses of protection from any molestation. That is an elementary step. Law enforcement would quickly break down if criminals were allowed to intimidate, annoy, or injure citizens who give evidence before the courts and grand juries, and protection against such reprisals must be insisted on regardless of whether the witness may himself have indulged in reprehensible conduct. If the police are negligent in performing this duty, they deserve the severest sort of discipline. Certainly some provision other than meager witness fees ought to be made also for the relief of citizens who are temporarily deprived of an income because of the heavy demands of the courts upon their time. Yesterday the court told Miss Franklin that she must continue to give testimony. That puts a heavy obligation upon the United States attorney and the police to give her full protection, and upon the Government that she is aiding to relieve her of the distress she has suffered.

Man's Specialty

Man, the lord of creation, isn't showing up too well as he meets the new competition from the machine. Now that we may have supersonic planes flying at 1500 miles an hour, there aren't any men capable of flying them, says S. Paul Johnston, director of the Institute of Aeronautical Science. Since the human organism can't take that speed, he predicts electronic and mechanical pilots will have to be substituted. What is more, the human eye is disdained as a detector of color by Norman F. Barnes, General Electric engineer. It is said to be especially unreliable in detecting shades of red and violet, and its color judgment is always affected by psychological moods. Hence Mr. Barnes uses a recording spectroscope which can distinguish among 10 million different colors.

Oh, but man, his defenders will say, is only supposed to excel in matters of mind and spirit. He is not competing with the gadget. Human relations and the arts of civilization are the fields of which he is master . . . Wait, did we hear aright? "Master?"

"Margarine vs Butter"

I should like to protest emphatically the editorial in your issue of January 5, which shows such a callous and cynical disregard for the interest of farmers and for the actual facts.

You do not even mention how dairy farmers of the dairy industry would be affected if the oleo legislation you favor were adopted. You do take up the problem of butterlegging and and fraudulent passing off of colored oleo as butter. You dismiss this problem as being of no importance, without citing any of the evidence that has been brought forward by dairy farmers and the dairy industry.

Specifically, you do not refer to the new survey cited by Senator Gillette, which was that four out of five people who use oleo at the table call it butter. This makes utterly ridiculous any claims about oleo standing on its own feet or being allowed to compete fairly for the spread market.

Nor do you mention the fact that another survey revealed that 66 out of 100 restaurants in the State of Kansas were illegally and fraudulently serving yellow oleo as butter. An enforcement campaign by Pennsylvania disclosed fraudulent passing off of oleo as butter on a similar scale in that State.

Your editorial also uses the irrelevant to prove a point. It states that Treasury officials are of the opinion that retention of the oleo tax "is not needed for regulatory purposes." No one contends the taxes are needed. Dairy farmers also support their removal.

More important, what does it matter what the Treasury officials think about regulations needed to prevent misrepresentation of foods? What does the Federal Food and Drug Administration have to say about the addition of color to foods to make them look like what they are not? The Food and Drug Administration prohibits additions of artificial color to mayonnaise, to orange drinks and to jellies because the addition of such color tends to deceive consumers. Why not ask the Food and Drug Administration if the addition of color to oleo will not tend to confuse the product with butter?

What is your view on the challenge issued by Mr. John Brandt, president of this association? He volunteered in behalf of dairy farmers to give up the fight on color, taxes, or any other control over oleo if the oleo manufacturers were required to observe the same standards in all particulars as are observed in butter producers. In other words, he proposed equal treatment for oleo and butter.

"Teachable Moment"

The other night I witnessed a scene that has happened so many times in Montgomery County that I cannot fail to comment on it. Many parents came to the Kensington Elementary P-TA to hear Mr. Ellsworth Tompkins of the United States Office of Education speak on "Trends in Education."

As is so often the case, there was little or nothing said that gave anybody any information, nothing but the usual fuzzy line of double-talk. Here are a couple of examples: Mr. Tompkins referred to "experiential intercourse," meaning, as nearly as I could gather, a child's relations with his fellow beings. Dr. Mary L. Grau, supervisor of elementary education in Montgomery County, referred to the "teachable moment," that moment out of all eternity when a child was ready to learn a given fact. She failed to say what to do if conditions reached their fulfillment in the middle of Junior's bath or while he was careening down the street on his bicycle. She also failed to give us the magic formula so we'd know just when this "teachable moment" for each fact had arrived.

To those seeking parents who are looking for real information on what is happening in our schools and what the trend of modern education is, I would like to recommend a book written by an educational layman in language that is straightforward and plain. It is And Madly Teach, by Mortimer Smith.

Dancing Girls

With reference to your January 6 front page sensational story "Dancing Girls Bequeathed to D. C. Artist and Brother," that the Greek brothers had an estate bequeathed to them by their uncle in Egypt may or may not be a fact, although as an Egyptian dealing with cultural matters and acquainted with most of Egypt's archeologists, I know of no archeologist called Aristophron.

What concerns us in the matter is to deny that dancing girls or any other human beings living on an estate or outside it could be bequeathed to anyone, Egyptian or foreign. Such a practice belongs to the system of serfdom which was an integral part of medieval land ownership in Europe and not in Egypt.

Any intelligent person could see from the glamorous picture you publish that this is no genuine Egyptian residence but a publicity stunt. One would not object to these sensational stories were it not for the vicious propaganda against Egypt that underlies them.

Fate of Formosa

The furore over the fate of Formosa lends emphasis once more to the sorry state of our foreign relations, and particularly points to the crying need for consistency and continuity in shaping the foreign policies of the United States. It is indeed a shame that our diplomacy should lag so far behind our economic and social leadership in this critical period of international flux, when the entire world looks to us for wise guidance therein.

It may seem highly presumptuous on my part to take issue with some of the illustrious legislators and "elder statesmen" who offer such widely diversified cures for our ills in the Pacific area today. However, my residence and experience as newspaperman and foreign correspondent in the Far East seem to warrant expression of my convictions. This is done, not in a spirit of criticism, but rather with a view to clearing the atmosphere by setting the public right on matters of vital import to future peace and world security.

In the first place, let me state that I thoroughly agree with the January 3 statement of Walter Lippmann: "The confusion in Congress today cannot be cleared up until we recognize that the Asiatic mainland is beyond the limits of effective American military power." Furthermore, I subscribe heartily to the conclusion that our Asiatic mission is to provide cooperative leadership for nations seeking the light of democracy—not either to foist our "Americanism" upon them or help perpetuate the "colonialism" of other Occidental nations which have exploited these unhappy people for so many centuries.

It is entirely beyond the point to base our action in regards Formosa on the premises that it must be "saved for the Nationalists" or "kept from the Communists"—even when we presume in both instances that reference is made solely to the Chinese. The fact is that this "Beautiful Island" is not now, and never has been, Chinese from either an ethical nor a geographical standpoint. It is part of the endless chain of Pacific islands extending from Alaska through the Aleutians, the Kuriles, Japan proper, the Philippines, Indonesia, etc., to Australia and New Zealand "down under."

As to the Formosan natives, they originally were "head-hunting" aborigines of Malay extraction, and in no way kindred to peoples on the Asiatic mainland—as was also the case with the "hairy Ainos," original inhabitants of the Japanese islands. The only claim the Chinese (Nationalists or Communists) have upon Formosa is the dubious "right of preemption," since their first conquests thereof date back to the seventh century. However, the Dutch, the Portuguese and, yes, the Japanese did far more toward bringing civilization to the island than the Chinese ever have—or ever will. (As a matter of historical fact, the island got its current name from Portuguese navigators, reverting thereto after being known as "Taiwan" during the 50 years of Japanese hegemony.)

One does not correct an error by committing another error. Our first great error was in recognizing Chinese claims to this island at the close of World War II. By the same token, it was both stupid and unjustified—from a defense, as well as a diplomatic viewpoint—for us to surrender the Kuriles and southern Sakhalin to the U.S.S.R. To have been consistent in our alleged "foreign policy" throughout the Pacific area, we should have returned the Philippines to Spain and recognized Dutch rights to suzerainty over the East Indies—on the flimsy grounds of "prior possession!"

By all that is right and honorable, Formosa should have been included among the Pacific islands held "in trusteeship," under the beneficent and disinterested interim control of the victors (the U. S. A.), pending arrival of the happy day when these underprivileged peoples can assume their rightful heritage as free and independent nations.

It is definitely not to the best interests of our country, democracy or world security for the U. S. A. to intervene directly in affairs of the Asiatic mainland or to "take sides" in the present struggle between Oriental political factions—be they Nationalists, Communists or whatnot. Our duty is to carry the torch of democracy and freedom to mankind everywhere and at all times—with proper regard for protection of the blessings we have gained at such great cost in suffering and substance. Therein—and therein alone—lies the way to the ultimate peace and world security, for which all mankind yearns.

MacArthur And Formosa

By Marquis Childs

Offstage Influence

IN DECIDING against any American military aid for Formosa, President Truman resolved a sharp difference of opinion between his Secretary of State and his Secretary of Defense. Dean Acheson opposed sending a military mission to help Chiang Kai-shek in his last stand on the island of Formosa. Louis Johnson insisted that a mission be sent.

But Johnson may still have his way. At the end of January the Joint Chiefs of Staff will make a tour of the Pacific. Word has reached the State Department that the Joint Chiefs, at Johnson's initiative, will go to Formosa.

That is, they will go if Formosa is still held by the Nationalists. Out of that visit could come, as is well understood in the State Department, a renewed demand for military advisers from the United States and even, in line with the extreme Republican position, for the United States Navy.

The controversy over Formosa must surely rank as one of the strangest in the Nation's history. It is mysterious, above all, because one of the principal figures is missing from the public view. It is just as though in a great painting the artist had left a blank space for the leading actor in the drama.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur has been more responsible than any single individual for pointing up the dispute over Formosa. Yet, publicly, he has not uttered a single word.

ON January 26, the commander of the American occupation in Japan will be 70 years old. For nearly 15 years MacArthur has not returned to the United States. He was first in the Philippines, helping to plan the Philippine defenses, and then he fought the entire war in the Pacific.

Briefly, here is the sequence of the Formosa dispute and MacArthur's part in it. The Joint Chiefs of Staff had taken a decision not to intervene with military assistance. That was prior to the visit to Tokyo of Assistant Secretary of the Army Tracy S. Voorhees and Army Deputy Chief of Staff Lieut. Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther.

MacArthur helped to persuade them that Formosa had to be held. On their return to the Pentagon, they were in turn influential in getting the Joint Chiefs to reverse the original decision. Secretary Johnson, too, came down heavily on the side of intervention.

But MacArthur's influence was most significant in its effect on traveling Republican Senators and, particularly, on Senator William Knowland of California and Senator H. Alexander Smith of New Jersey. These and other visitors felt the full weight of MacArthur's impressive personality, and at the same time he made planes and officers available so that they could visit Formosa to get the Nationalist point of view.

It was out of MacArthur's headquarters in Tokyo that the State Department memorandum on the need to prepare for the fall of Formosa was leaked. A constant stream of top secret MacArthur telegrams flows into the Pentagon urging immediate action. Thus, behind the majestic silence he outwardly maintains, MacArthur is the key figure.

QUITE apart from his passionate convictions on Formosa and Chiang Kai-shek, MacArthur, according to one of his closest friends now in this country, feels a deep sense of grievance at his treatment since the war. The European generals and even some of MacArthur's subordinates returned to receive triumphal welcomes. But, according to his friend, MacArthur was offered by Gen. George C. Marshall a week's free vacation at a fashionable resort if he wanted to return on a brief leave.

The hero of Bataan was deeply offended. His friend quotes him as having said at the time:

"I shall not return until I am asked to return by a joint resolution of both houses of Congress."

If the Republicans were in control of House and Senate, they could be expected to try to put through such a resolution. But short of that, MacArthur is likely to stay where he is and remain what he is—an imponderable and silent force in the great Asia debate.

By law, all officers of the Army are required to retire at the age of 62 except four-star generals, whose term may be extended to 64, and five-star generals—MacArthur, Eisenhower, Arnold and Marshall — who never retire. Even though they may be in civilian life—Marshall is head of the Red Cross, Eisenhower president of Columbia University—they remain as "officers of the United States Army on active duty without an assignment."

This means that MacArthur, if he chooses, can stay in Japan indefinitely. And he shows every sign of doing just that.

Home Hates

In your issue of January 4 is a disgusting detailed recital, pictures and all, of the home hates of an aged man and his wife.

If a reporter cannot tell the story of a family dispute without the introduction of bold realism bordering on the obscene he should give up the profession of reporting, especially for The Washington Post. Some supervision of reporters would go a long way toward keeping filthy "trash" from the minds of young people some of whom may be desperately concerned about keeping their thoughts clean.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Against This Background

THIS WEEK Mr. Acheson makes his statements to Congress and to the public. Not the least of his difficulties is to decide how candidly to explain the gravity of the situation; how radically he should admit that it is necessary to alter the assumptions on which American policy in the cold war has been based.

Lippmann

Since the Truman Doctrine was proclaimed three years ago the American position has deteriorated seriously under the impact of two great events which occurred in 1949. The one was the success of the Soviet Union in breaking the American monopoly of atomic weapons. The other was the success of Mao Tse-tung in organizing and leading the Chinese revolutions.

These two events will have profound consequences all around the vast Eurasian continent—and particularly on the two key countries which will be decisive for the balance of power in the world. The one is Germany. The other is Japan. In both Germany and Japan the underlying forces which pull them towards the Soviet Union and away from us are now very strong indeed.

THEY HAVE always been strong, and the Western world owes it more to good luck than to good management, to the excessive ambitions of Hitler and of the Japanese warlords and the Russian imperialists, that the alliance of Germany, Russia, and Japan, though it was attempted, was never consummated. Had it been, the combination would have been the master of Europe and of Asia. If it is consummated, it will be the master of Europe and of Asia.

That has not yet happened. But in an estimate of the world situation today we must, I believe, recognize how great an impetus has been given to it. We must never lose sight of it, we must never be diverted by minor issues, like Formosa, from the constant realization that the great objective of Soviet policy is an alliance with Germany and with Japan. If it is true, and no doubt it is true, that the ambition of the Kremlin is world domination, then that is the way to world domination.

IN THE light of this paramount danger a reexamination of our policy is most urgent. I mean the policy of "containment," which rests concretely on the partition of Germany, the occupation of Japan, and an almost complete nonintercourse with all the countries within the Soviet orbit. This policy is based on premises which are now demonstrably fallacious—that a virtual blockade of the Soviet orbit will strangle communism and reduce its military potential.

During the blockade of the Soviet orbit communism has expanded all over China. And with China in Communist hands nonintercourse will mean that Japan is in effect blockaded and can be kept going only as long as it is subsidized by the United States.

Nor has the policy of containment reduced the military potential of Russia. The Soviet Union has achieved atomic weapons. Having achieved them, neither Germany nor Japan can toy with the idea of becoming military bastions of the West. Against the Ruhr, against the crowded islands of Japan, both within easy reach of Soviet air power, the atomic bomb is a decisive diplomatic weapon. It is almost academic to debate whether we should or should not rearm the Germans and the Japanese against the Soviet Union. For the governing fact is that neither we, nor the Germans and the Japanese, could defend Germany and Japan against atomic attack.

IF WE continue to stand on the lines of our policy as they were laid down in 1947, we must expect Germany and Japan to draw nearer and nearer—not necessarily to communism as such—but to alliances with Russia. The lines of our policy are contrary to the vital interests of Germany and Japan. We do not offer Western Germany or Japan security. We do not offer Germany her own unity and access to the Eastern markets and supplies. We do not offer Japan access to the mainland though her economic life depends upon it.

Therefore, the Germans and the Japanese will most certainly work to extricate themselves from our control in order to recover their own freedom of maneuver. That precisely is what the Germans are already doing. It is what we would do, were we in their place. For the containment policy denies them unity, security, and economic opportunity. Therefore they must, they will, they do, wriggle out of it.

THE LINES of a new policy will have to be set within the choices that are really open to us. If our paramount purpose is to avert alliances between Germany, Japan and Russia, then we must forego any idea of making Germany and Japan our allies. That leaves but one direction which we can take—to work for the military and political neutralization of these two countries.

That is difficult but it is not impossible. For Germany and Japan cannot join us without making themselves the first targets of Russian attack. They cannot join Russia without making themselves the targets of our attack. Their only hope of security, and the world's only hope of peace, is that instead of their becoming bastions, satellites, containing walls and jumping off places, they should become buffer states between the great powers.

GERMAN opinion—I think I am right in this—is coming certainly and swiftly to this conclusion. If we are to retain any constructive influence on the future of Germany, and therefore of Europe, we should not lag too far behind.

Hays Plans Substitute For FEPC Measure

Representative Hays (D., Ark.) yesterday said he would offer a substitute to the Administration's Fair Employment Practices Commission bill that would use "the gradual policy of education," to overcome race discrimination in employment.

He described his bill as a "minorities employment" measure devoid of enforcement penalties. He said he would offer it on the House floor when the chamber takes up FEPC legislation late this month.

Paramount Theaters Installing Television

New York, Jan. 9 (AP).—Plans for extensive use of television in the Paramount Theater chain were announced today.

Leonard H. Goldenson, president of the newly formed United Paramount Theaters, said equipment had been ordered for large screen television for theaters in Detroit, Boston, San Francisco and Minneapolis. The firm's theaters in New York and Chicago already have large screen video.

Goldenson said the company ultimately envisioned the use of television in all its 650 theaters throughout the country.

Vote Abroad Costs Woman Citizenship

Voting in a 1945 election in Hungary cost a 49-year-old American-born woman her citizenship, Judge Burnita S. Matthews of District Court ruled yesterday.

The decision was made despite the claims of the expatriate, Mrs. Gizella M. Kazdy-Reich, that she voted against the Communists and only because she feared that she might suffer if she declined to vote.

Judge Matthews said that there was no evidence Mrs. Kazdy-Reich voted under compulsion. She said it did not matter for which party the plaintiff cast her ballot.

Mrs. Kazdy-Reich was born in Cleveland but went to Hungary in 1935 with her husband, Emil, who was a citizen of that country.

In response to her plea that she always intended to keep her citizenship, Assistant United States Attorney Stafford Grady replied that she did not show any outward sign of this desire until after General Rommel had been driven from Africa and the invasion of Sicily.

'Axis Sally' Asks Review Of Conviction

Mildred (Axis Sally) Gillars yesterday asked a reversal of her treason conviction on the grounds that she had taken an oath to Germany before she made her wartime broadcasts for the Axis.

Miss Gillars was in District Jail yesterday while Attorney James J. Laughlin argued her case before United States District Court of Appeals judges Bennett Champ Clark, Wilbur Miller and Charles Fahy. She is under sentence of 10 to 30 years and a $10,000 fine.

Judge Henry W. Edgerton disqualified himself on motion by Laughlin who had claimed the judge was "partisan" of President Roosevelt, target of many of the Axis Sally broadcasts.

Government attorney Frank Cunningham argued, however, that Sally consistently asserted at her District Court trial that she was loyal to the United States. Cunningham also said Laughlin had cited a paper she had signed in Germany, expressing loyalty to the Nazi government, as evidence of compulsion used against her. He said renunciation of citizenship can only be on a voluntary basis.

Gubitchev Loses Immunity Plea, Must Face Trial

New York, Jan. 9 (U.P.).—Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan today threw out Valentin A. Gubitchev's claim to diplomatic immunity and ordered hte Russian engineer tried on charges of conspiring with Judith Coplon to commit espionage.

Gubitchev, formerly employed by the United Nations, had moved to dismiss the indictment. Judge Ryan rejected the motion on grounds that exclusive jurisdiction on such a motion is vested in the United States Supreme Court. He ordered Gubitchev to stand trial.

Gubitchev will be tried on the charge that he and Miss Coplon, former Government girl, conspired to transmit vital American documents to a foreign power.

Miss Coplon was convicted in Washington July 1, after being accused of stealing Government documents from the Justice Department with intent to transmit them to a foreign power.

One on the Aisle—

An Odd Character Etched by Raimu

By Richard L. Coe

ALTHOUGH THE SCREEN career of the late Raimu lasted but 16 years, that able Frenchman left a legacy of screen plays that has made it possible, since his death in September, 1946, for us to see one or two of his films each year.

Latest of these has arrived at the Dupont, "Strangers in the House." This is not one of his great pictures, but once more it's possible to admire him in one of those revealing portraits of his art.

Raimu had the art of seeming totally uninteresting at first glance. Large, untidy, by no means handsome, he generally seemed the sort of man who had lived his life, that nothing of real interest could happen to him. Yet, thanks to his shrewd use of vehicles, he was able, from this unprepossessing first impression, to lure an audience inside himself.

And there one usually found a man very much alive, immensely perceptive in his thoughts of others and his understanding of himself. He achieved such characterizations in "The Baker's Wife," "The Welldigger's Daughter" and "Un Carnet de Bal." In them you found that the mature life could be not only interesting, but far fuller than in the baby-faced innocents to whom the camera is so naturally devoted.

To an American, this Frenchman inevitably recalled the screen personality of Wallace Beery, but a more subtle fellow, intelligent rather than reflexive. And despite the barrier of language, Raimu became and remains a popular figure among the Yank movie fanciers.

In "Strangers in the House" he plays a sotted lawyer, whose wife left him and their baby daughter 18 years before. He's let the child grow up pretty much by herself; instead of being a father to her, he dreams and boozes his life away in solitude.

One night a strange man, with his leg in a cast, is found shot dead in an upper, never used bedroom of the lonely house. The lawyer will take only what steps must be to notify the law, but allows himself no interest in the murder.

The Human Comedy

Slowly, it develops that his daughter has been the only feminine member of a gang of youths who have been pillaging in the small provincial city. The better and the poorer elements of the town are implicated in the gang and the dazed old man finds himself using his perceptive brain for the first time in years to clear his daughter and the young man who appears to have committed the crime.

In building to this unaccustomed exertion, the lawyer becomes a human, pathetic and perceptive man. Raimu takes his time in finally becoming a man of action. He skillfully suggests to you that though he has achieved something in pointing to the parents as the true causes of youthful crime, his will be no complete redemption on earth. The mind breaks through the alcoholic fog, but it is not to be a complete about face.

It is this sense of logical behavior, not idyllic triumph, that marks the difference between what Wally Beery might have been called on to do had the story been filmed in our own happy land. The French—and Raimu—are too wryly wise to permit the total reversal.

The supporting roles are handled with Gallic asperity and the English subtitles are fully sufficient. As for Raimu, it is indeed a treat to watch his incomparable style of etching the human comedy.

"STRANGERS IN THE HOUSE," a Lopert Films release, directed by Henri Decoin, screenplay by Henri-Georges-Clouzot from the novel by Georges Simenon and Clouzot. At the Dupont.

Lustron to Earn Profit by May 'With More Help'

By The Associated Press

The Lustron Corp., seeking more millions of Federal aid, said yesterday its leanest days are over and it will be earning a profit by May—if it gets more help.

The Columbus, Ohio, housing prefabricators made their prediction in a letter to Senators Sparkman (D., Ala.) and Flanders (R., Vt.), who requested the information.

Carl G. Strandlund, president of Lustron, said his company will announce this month some smaller-type steel-and-porcelain prefabricated houses, the cheaper of the two new models to sell "for less than $7500."

Lustron already has borrowed $37,500,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to launch its venture, and is seeking an undisclosed number of millions more from RFC. Strandlund invested $1000 and his patent rights.

The RFC has shut off loans to Lustron and demanded that it get any needed financing from private investors.

In the letter to the Senators, Strandlund said Lustron plans to boost its production and sales from 175 houses this month to 851 in May, if it gets money to stay in operation that long.

Group Forms for New World Federation Try

House supporters of a world federation yesterday organized for a new try, and claimed a strength of more than 100.

Representatives Brooks Hays (D., Ark.) presided over the session, attended by about 20 House members. Hays said prospects are bright for favorable action on a federation resolution at this session of Congress. A similar proposal is before the Senate.

Air Patrol Bill Urged

Legislation to make the Civil Air Patrol an auxiliary of the Air Force was proposed yesterday by Senator Tydings (D., Md.).

Brannan Plan 'Veto' Seen by Farm Group

Baltimore, Jan. 9 (AP).—Maryland Farm Bureau members, who today heard a tobacco growers' spokesman reject Government price support, are expected to voice their opposition to the Brannan plan as meetings begin on Tuesday.

Some 5000 rural leaders, representing 12,000 members, are expected for the annual session, preceded today by meetings of half a dozen specialized farm groups.

Advance indications were that a resolution against the Brannan plan will ge a resounding indorsement.

C. Carroll Lee, vice president of the Maryland Tobacco Growers' Association, criticized the support program.

Lee's opposition to price supports was aimed particularly at their possible extension of the Baltimore hogshead market, where many growers sell their leaf instead of taking it to the southern Maryland auction floors.

"Support prices (66 cents a pound on the southern Maryland markets) are not needed and we don't want the Federal Government meddling in our business," Lee said.

"Support prices amount to taking money out of your right pocket and putting it in your left when you consider that you have to pay taxes to finance the price support bill."

Edward K. Bender, vegetable specialist at the University of Maryland, told the vegetable growers that more of them ought to try the new top crop variety of snap beans. He reported on tests that show it produces as much as 163 percent more than standard varities.

Dr. G. M. Beal, agricultural economist from the university, predicted for the stockmen that their 1950 incomes will be somewhat lower.

He said the demand is slackening and most people have a little less money. The new year, he declared, still will be a good one.

'Write-ins' Put Board in Office Again

Upper Marlboro voters literally wrote their own ticket yesterday in reelecting the incumbent three-man board of town commissioners.

Conspicuous by their absence at the election were official ballots and designated candidates. Citizens lined up for stubby pencils and scraps of paper to write down the name of any person they thought fit for the office.

When the 93 "ballots" were tabulated the old board was in office again.

Reelected were T. Van Clagett, jr., lawyer, who polled 91 votes. Roland R. Ryon, local ice plant operator, who received 88 votes, and R. Harrison Sothoron, title examiner, 52 votes.

Walton G. Banks, surveyor, whose name was written on 44 ballots and Abram Z. Gottwals, businessman, who received two votes, were the only other names that appeared on the ballots.

As 'Messenger'

Youth Held In Thefts From Offices

Emory James Foster, jr., 19, was ordered held in $6000 bond yesterday for action of the grand jury as the youth who has been looting Government offices.

Police charged Foster with four cases of larceny before taking him before U. S. Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence and said they believe he is responsible for at least 20 more similar thefts.

Police said Foster, who lives at 217 Lowry pl. ne., would appear in a Government office carrying a large manila envelope so as to appear to be a Government messenger.

Then, they said, he would size up the office and loot women's pocketbooks and steal overcoats. Police said two stolen overcoats, valued at $135 and $125, were recovered at Foster's home.

Detective Lieut. Albert B. Hitt and Detective Sergt. Charles L. Pemberton said he had been doing this since last May.

No Atom Shelter For White House, Architect Says

There are no plans for an atom bomb shelter in the renovated White House, the vice chairman of the Commission on the Renovation of the Executive Mansion said yesterday.

Asked about any such plans, Douglas W. Orr, New Haven (Conn.) architect, said that "there is nothing we can do about building such a shelter in the White House."

Orr had described the work to be done on the Executive Mansion, and some of its structural history, as guest speaker at a luncheon meeting of the Washington Building Congress at the Mayflower Hotel.

Suburban Hospital Starts Drive for Fund of $60,000

Suburban Hospital's 1950 membership and purchasing fund drive opens today with a double-barreled objective.

Mrs. Powell

The Bethesda institution is seeking to raise $60,000 for annual operating expenses and to retire a part of the debt incurred by the recent purchase of the 6-year-old facilities from the Federal Government.

"If the enthusiastic response given to our appeal for volunteer workers is any indication of the response we will get to our funds appeal, our campaign cannot possibly fail," Mrs. Benjamin A. Powell, campaign chairman, said yesterday.

put together by police, Fleshman put the gun behind his right ear and pulled the trigger.

In the house when the shootings occurred was one of the Fleshmans' two children, Patricia Ann, 5. A second child, James Alfred, 3, has been living with his father at 5307 Farragut st., Rogers Heights, Md.

Also in the house were Mrs. Hawkins, mother of the wounded wife, and three more of her children, Carlisle, 10, Carroll, 8, and Wanda, 4.

Fleshman, his wife and the father were taken to the hospital by the Bladensburg and Branchville rescue squads. Rescue operations were directed by Richard Hughes, chief of all rescue squads in the county.

State Trooper Aids

Joining Pearson in the investigation was State Trooper Earl R. Griffith of the Waterloo Barracks.

County police said that Fleshman had been asociated with his cousin, Lee Fleshman, in operating an ice business in Hyattsville.

Police records show that Fleshman was the driver of a truck which struck and killed Epps Plumer, 35, of 1704 14th st. ne., last August 29 on Baltimore blvd. near College Park.

Fleshman's story at that time that the man had suddenly jumped into the path of his car was verified by two witnesses and a certificate of suicide was issued.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan. 9 (AP).—Grains dropped sharply on the Board of Trade today, ending at the lows in a market which headed downward right from the start.

A trade report that France had been cut of from Marshall Plan funds for importing American wheat, or soon would be, highlighted a late selling movement. But the market had shown a decidedly easier tendency before that rumor started circulating.

Wheat closed 1½ to 2½ lower. Corn was 2 to 2 lower. Oats were ⅛ to 1½ lower. Rye was 2½ to 2¼ lower. Soybeans were 2½ to 3 cents lower, and lard was 5 to 15 cents a hundred pounds lower.

Falls Church Boosts City Attorney's Pay

Upon Mayor Albert Orme's recommendation, the Falls Church City Council last night raised City Attorney LaRue Van Meter's salary from $3000 to $6500 a year—the salary which he received in 1949 for the dual job of city attorney and commissioner of revenue.

The action was taken by a vote of six to one, with James E. Durant abstaining. Mandley Rust, another member, was absent at the time of the voting.

Kemper Grille was against the action on the basis that the commissioner of revenue was just as important as the city attorney.

Van Meter who has acted as full-time city attorney at a salary of $3000 a year since September 1948, said he has been working an average of 16 hours a day for the past year. Prior to 1948 he was attorney for the town of Falls Church on a part-time basis for about three years.

Lee M. Rhoades, chairman of the council's special committee on delinquent taxes, gave the city's reply to charges made by northern Virginia attorneys last October, that "the city was giving out misinformation and keeping faulty tax records."

Rhoades said it was not the city's responsibility to act as a land office, but only to answer inquiries as to a certain person's delinquent taxes.

In other actions, the council voted to employ Horace Edwards, Richmond attorney, to prosecute the city's annexation suit, which will probably go to court early in the spring. The city proposes to annex several square miles of Fairfax County.

The council voted to name W. H. Glover, of 539 Great Falls st., to fill the unexpired term of George T. Reeves on the Falls Church School Board.

Kogod Named To 4th Term By Center

Fred S. Kogod, member of the District Board of Pubic Welfare and president of K-B Theaters, was reelected president of the Jewish Community Center at its twenty-fourth annual meeting last night.

Kogod

In addition to Kogod, who will be serving his fourth term, other officers chosen at the center, 1629 16th st. nw., are:

Simon Hirshman, 1st vice president; Leopold V. Freudberg, 2d vice president; J. B. Shapiro, 3d vice president; Fred S. Gichner, treasurer; Robert J. Rothstein, assistant treasurer; Abe Shefferman, recording secretary; and Moe Offenberg coresponding secretary.

Thirteen men were elected to three-year terms on the Board of Directors; Judge David L. Bazelon, Leo Bernstein, Dr. M. A. Goldberg, Cecil Kaufmann, Milton Kronheim, sr., Ben Ourisman, Gus Ring, Benjamin Rich, John Safer, Burnett Siman, I. S. Turover, Melvin Viner, and J. A. Wilner.

ECA Takes Dim View of Wheat Sale by France

By The Associated Press

The Economic Cooperation Administration reported last night that France, which received millions of United States dollars last year to buy grain, recently sold $2,500,000 worth of wheat to Holland.

Dr. Dennis A. Fitzgerald, ECA's director of food and agriculture, confirmed the fact that the sale had been made and said the recovery agency takes a "dim view" of the transaction.

But he and other ECA officials said there was nothing illegal about the sale of some 30,000 tons of French wheat. Fitzgerald said ECA does not intend to cut off all dollar aid to France because of the deal. He commented, however, that the agency might be reluctant to provide further money for wheat purchases.

"However, we take a dim view of the matter since the French did not notify us of their intention to make the deal and since there is a possibility that France may find it necessary to ask for more dollars later this year to buy grain before the 1950 harvest is in," he said.

Sergeant Killed In Crash Identified As Roy Jackson

An Army sergeant killed in an Arlington traffic crash late Sunday was identified by military authorities yesterday as Roy F. Jackson, 27, of the First School Battalion, Fort Belvoir.

Sergeant Jackson was riding in a car which crashed into a tractor-trailer on the 2800 block of Jefferson Davis hwy. at about 11:45 p. m., Arlington police said. Injured in the collision and admitted to Fort Belvoir Hospital were three other occupants of the car, Sergt. Marvin E. Taylor, 30, listed by police as the driver; Pvt. Eugene Campbell, 22, and Pvt. Walter M. Lindsay, 28, all of the First School Batallion.

According to the police report, the car occupied by the soldiers struck a trailer driven by Otis Ray Major, 25, of Fredericksburg, who was uninjured. No charges have been placed, police said.

Mankind Can Solve Future, Sachar Says

Dr. Abram L. Sachar, president of Brandeis University, said last night the future holds great hope for mankind if men will work cooperatively to solve the "problems they created for themselves."

In an address to a capacity audience at the Jewish Community Center, 16th and Q sts. nw., Dr. Sachar said the quickest way to bring about a war is to "continue to speak of war's inevitability."

Caucuses to Fill Open Seats To Precede Assembly Opening

Richmond, Va., Jan. 9 (AP).—Democratic majority caucuses Tuesday night will set the stage for Wednesday's formal opening of the 1950 Virginia General Assembly.

At separate sessions in their respective halls, House and Senate Democrats apparently will sound a harmonious prelude for a session that soon may produce anything but harmony on many problems.

Tuesday night's business will be chiefly to nominate unopposed candidates for speaker of the House, clerk of the House and other asembly posts filled by vote of the membership.

Both branches convene officially at noon Wednesday. Their first major business will be one of listening—to Governor Tuck's farewell message on the affairs of the Commonwealth.

At least one chore calls for prompt attention by the House of Delegates: an election contest to determine who shall occupy Russel County's seat in the House. This wil be handed to the House privileges and elections committee Wednesday prior to ultimate action by the House itself.

Aside from the Russell contest, which is strictly a House matter, both branches will have to wrestle with major legislative problems in education, election laws, taxation, fiscal policy and other fields through the 60-day session.

To the docket posed earlier by legislative study reports and by various members' announcements, three matters were added today.

Delegate L. Lake Triplett of Fausuier said he would introduce a bill requiring State ABC stores to sell half-pint bottles of liquor, as well as the pint-size and larger containers. This would be a step for temperance, he explained.

Delegate W. Griffith Purcell of Richmond said he will sponsor legislation to have the State share in paying for local sewage disposal plants.

Maryland U. Planning Fund Is Approved

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 9 (AP).—The University of Maryland today was given the green light to proceed with "advanced planning" on $4,850,000 in new buildings, including a $2,000,000 library at College Park.

The State Board of Public Works authorized President H. C. Byrd to apply for $171,000 in Federal aid for necessary architects' fees for the buildings which include a $325,000 poultry building at College Park, a $400,000 library in Baltimore and many new buildings at the Maryland State College for Negroes at Princess Anne.

The board also sold $9,740,000 worth of school bonds, the first issues floated under a $70,000,000 school loan program approved in 1949 by the Legislature.

State Engineer John B. Funk said the university's contemplated construction program probably will not be laid before the Legislature until 1951 or later.

Proposed for Princess Anne were an engineering and mechanical arts building, chemistry and physics building, home economics building, library, men's field house and gym, general warehouse and addition to girls' gym.

High Court Refuses To Consider Plea In Numbers Case

The Supreme Court yesterday refused to consider the appeal of a man convicted in a 1948 numbers case here.

He is Bernard Newyahr, who gave his address when arrested as 901 New York ave. nw. The Court of Appeals upheld his arrest, made without a warrant on the evidence of a policeman who had admittedly placed bets himself.

Vatican Eases Ban On Electronic Organs

Rome, Jan. 9 (NYHT).—A two-year effort by American electronic organ companies to get Vatican permission for use of their instruments in Roman Catholic churches succeeded partially today.

The Vatican's sacred congregation of rites announced that from now on Catholic bishops can authorize electronic organs in their local churches so long as prescribed conditions are met.

One condition will be that it be "wholly impossible" for the church involved to purchase a pipe organ of the familiar old type, the rites congregation said.

Hogan Shoots 69, Pulls Within Two Strokes of Lead

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

TED WILLIAMS missed the American League batting title on that last day of the season when Vic Raschi held him hitless, but he qualified for one superlative nevertheless. Nobody ever missed the championship by a narrower margin. George Kell's winning bulge was .00015 percentage points, or less than two-tenthousandths.

POVICH

The high drama of the Yankee-Red Sox game that decided the pennant on that final day blanketed the excitement of the Williams-Kell battle for the batting crown. But at the day's end, Kell had it, and by no means was it by default. He grabbed it off by making two hits in three times at bat against Cleveland's Bob Lemon and Bob Feller, a pair of pretty good pitchers.

But even Kell couldn't match the last-day heroics of Buddy Myer who nosed out Joe Vosmik for the title on the final day of the 1935 season. Joe Vosmik, of the Indians, was leading Myer by two points going into the Nats' last game of the season. The Nats were finishing up with a single game at Shibe Park while Vosmik faced a doubleheader with the Browns.

Leaving for Philadelphia that morning, Myer picked an object off the carpet in the lobby of his apartment. "What's that?" inquired Mrs. Myer. "It's a two-base hit," said Buddy, flourishing a safety pin. "They always mean you're gonna get a two-bagger."

NOBODY'S superstitions were ever more justified. His fourth hit of the day in Philadelphia was, indeed, a two-bagger to left center off Bill Dietrich that pushed him up to an average of .3495, better by 6/1000 of a point than the figure with which Vosmik ended up.

Myer struck without delay to win the title that day. One of the finest bunters in the league, he laid one down and beat it out in his first trip to the plate. He singled to center his next time up. His third trip was an infield out, but his fourth time up he whacked a single to left. It was a wild game, winding up 11-8 in favor of the A's, and Myer had a fifth chance. That was when he doubled.

Out in Cleveland, meanwhile, the Indians were holding Vosmik out of action against the Browns to protect his two-point margin. But when news of Myer's batting splurge reached the Cleveland bench, Vosmik was sent in to pinch hit in the final inning of the first game of the twin bill. He went hitless. In desperation, he played the entire second game, made only one hit in three trips and wound up loser.

IT WASN'T the first time Vosmik had figured in that kind of a losing batting race on the final day of a season. Back in the minor leagues, at Frederick in the Blue Ridge, Vosmik was reaching for the batting crown in a close race with Roger (Doc) Cramer, then playing the outfield for Martinsburg. They were virtually deadlocked on the season's last day in 1929.

Cramer was no less eager than Vosmik for the title, and the last game pitted Martinsburg against Frederick, head to head. Cramer was gambling heavily on himself. He asked the Martinsburg manager for permission to leave the outfield and pitch the game, and got it. As a pitcher, he held Vosmik hitless, made two hits himself and wound up with the title.

But the most hectic finish of a batting race of all time doubtless was the 1910 episode in the American League when Nap Lajoie of the Indians and Ty Cobb of the Tigers were the two leaders. In the unofficial averages, Lajoie had a slight lead going into the final game with the Browns while Cobb was on the Detroit bench with an injury.

FROM ST. LOUIS at the end of the day came day came the startling news that Lajoie had made eight hits in eight times at bat. No less than seven of them were safe bunts he had beaten out against John Corriden and Bobby Wallace, the Browns' third basemen. There were cries of frame-up and the charge that St. Louis players were trying to shoo Lajoie into the title ahead of the much-hated Cobb.

Baseball's integrity was loudly questioned, "if this sort of thing can happen." The point was made that Lajoie was not a fast man, and no great bunting threat. Also that Corriden was playing back on the edge of the grass in no position to grab bunts. Ban Johnson, president of the American League started an inquiry. The Chalmers Automobile Co., of Detroit, held up the award of a Chalmers car to be given the league batting champion.

Ty Cobb refused to congratulate Lajoie. He wouldn't, he said, even if the official averages, due a month later, showed Lajoie to be the winner. The official averages finally got everybody off the spot, showing as they did that Cobb had finished with a .385, a point more than Lajoie.

Barber Slips But Stays in Front With 3-Day 209

Los Angeles, Jan. 9 (U.P.)—Ben Hogan, playing in his first tournament since his near-fatal auto crash, gallantly drove to within two strokes of first-place Jerry Barber today with a sub-par 69 at the end of the third round of the $15,000 Los Angeles Open golf tourney.

Barber, a dark horse from Pasadena, Calif., carded a one-over par 72 over the rugged Riviera Country Club course to retain the lead he has held since the first round with a 54-hole total of 209. He was five strokes ahead of Hogan as today's round began.

And Hogan, the gallery's darling as he stages his amazing comeback, blasted out his two-under-par 69 for a total of 211 strokes and second place. On three holes his putter went sour and he took bogies, but he more than made up for that with five birdies.

Hogan Flubs Putts

His par-breaking performance was his second 69 in two days. He was out in 32, three under par. His drive on the tenth got him in trouble and he bogied the hole with a five. But he came back to birdie the 569-yard eleventh hole with a four after dropping a 120-yard approach within 10 inches of the cup.

Hogan missed putts to bogie the fourteenth and fifteenth holes but birdied the par three, 145-yard sixteenth when he played his tee shot 6 feet from the pin.

As he finished the round with two pars, he said his legs, so badly hurt in an auto crash 11 months ago that it was thought he would never play again, are holding up "okay," indicating that he will be fighting tomorrow to close the gap on Barber.

Jack Burke of White Plains, N. Y., shot a three under par 68 to go into third place with a 212, just a stroke behind Hogan.

Others who moved closer to Barber included Ellsworth Vines, Pasadena, who had a 71 for 213; Sam Snead of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., who also shot a par 71 for 214; Henry Ransom, St. Andrews, Ill., 75-214, and Bob Hamilton, Landover, Md., 71-215.

Hogan's irons were beautifully executed today. One approach left him with a 7-inch putt for a birdie, another died just 7 feet from the cup. He got both shots down.

But he began to show signs of leg weariness on the back nine. And lady luck gave him several bad digs, too. He lost a stroke to par with a tee shot that landed under a bush on the tenth. He three-putted the fourteenth and fifteenth holes, missing an 18-inch putt on the former.

Just before that, one of his putts curled into the cup for a birdie, and then curled out.

To Comply With 'Purity Code'

NCAA Head Suggests Virginia Step Down To Smaller Class

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

The University of Virginia should step down a notch and play smaller schools if it cannot have a first class football team and still comply with the N.C.A.A. "purity code."

That's what Dr. Karl Leib, president of the N.C.A.A., said here yesterday before leaving the United States Olympic Association convention to go to New York. In New York Thursday, he'll preside over the N.C.A.A.'s annual convention.

What Leib meant in his reference to Virginia is that Virginia might not feel the need of giving extra help to its athletes, if it played smaller schools.

"We can't make any exceptions in the code for Virginia or any of the military schools, which admit they can't play major collegiate football without special subsidization of the game," said Leib.

Virginia, Virginia Military Institute, The Citadel and Virginia Tech, the latter three military schools, have admitted they are not complying with the purity code and cannot comply.

* * * * * *

. . . president of NCAA

"It is highly possible," said Leib, "that the case of Virginia and six other schools will come up Thursday and a vote will be taken on whether or not to expel them. A two-thirds vote is needed to expel them. If that vote is not forthcoming, we might as well junk the code. It must be enforced.

"If the code is junked, the separate conferences again will be empowered to draw up their own standards.

"The N. C. A. A. is not conducting a witch hunt. We are trying to draw up a workable set of rules to prevent professionalism in college football.

"It can be workable if the college presidents will cooperate.

"All that is needed is for a president to tell his athletic director that the school has agreed to live up to the N. C. A. A. code, ell him that he must build his teams within the code.

More Jobs in Big Schools

"If a school cannot play within the code and stay bigtime, then let it go down a notch and play within a smaller class.

"I believe that, by and large, the big schools in the Western Conference, Pacific Conference and other big conferences are complying.

"There will never be equality among all schools. This is technically impossible. Large city schools are bound to have more jobs available. For a school to assume it has the right to have a topnotch football team regardless of its circumstances is foolish.

"Expulsion from the N. C. A. A. is a serious thing. We are not considering Virginia's case lightly. No N. C. A. A. school will be permitted to play a school which has been expelled. Existing contracts will be honored, but that's all. I think the present rule is desirable," said Leib.

Virginia's athletic director Norton Pritchett also was in town for the United States Olympic Association meeting, and leaves today for New York.

He chatted amicably with Dr. Leib, "an old friend of mine," but he refused to pose for pictures with the NCAA head "because people might misconstrue a picture of us together."

Pritchett reiterated his school's stand that it can't expect its football scholarship players to practice, work and still maintain good grades, as the NCAA rules specify. Many of its scholarship players do not work.

"I am not saying that other schools are being dishonest in saying that they are complying," said Pritchett. "I just know that my school cannot comply, and I can't see how other schools can."

"I am not saying that there is no chance for a compromise in New York," continued Prichett. "If the other schools come out and say that they cannot comply with the code, the way will be open for a compromise."

VPI Won't 'Lie' to Hold NCAA Berth

Richmond, Va., Jan. 9 (AP).—A Virginia Tech official said today it seems to him the National Collegiate Athletic Association "wants us to lie about things" in order to get in line with the NCAA sanity code provisions.

"If we write the NCAA a little note and say that we are going to comply, well, apparently that would fix everything," said the official, who declined to be identified for "personal reasons."

"Virginia Tech would then be back in the good graces of the NCAA," he said. "And the NCAA apparently won't care how much non-complying we do so long as we say on paper that everything is on the up and up."

The official quickly added:

"But I'll say right now that I know we aren't going to lie over our president's name."

6 Others Face Expulsion

Virginia Tech and six other schools face expulsion from the NCAA and a schedule boycott when the association meets in New York this weekend. The code was set up in an effort to remove some of the "professionalism" from college athletics, particularly football, and to place a restriction on subsidization.

The names of the schools recommended for expulsion by Kenneth L. (Tug) Wilson, NCAA secretary-treasurer, have not been made public. However, known to be on the "black list" in addition to Tech are the University of Virginia and The Citadel.

The Tech source said that personally he doesn't think the NCAA is "going to kick anybody out."

"How can they?" he asked. "It would wreck the football schedules of several schools which say they are abiding by the code. There may be some cases where one, two, three or perhaps even more of the 'unpure' schools appear on the football schedules of the 'pure' schools. How could they fill these dates which suddenly are opened up?"

Edwards Quits Redskins For Sporting Goods Job

GLENN (TURK) EDWARDS yesterday ended his 18-year association with the Redskins by resigning as executive vice president to go into the sporting goods business at Spokane, Wash.

"I am through with football, although I'll undoubtedly retain my interest," said the former Washington State All-America tackle.

He said that he took the West Coast job because it looks like it might provide a good income and because Mrs. Edwards' parents live in Seattle.

Edwards, 260-pound tackle, joined the Redskins in 1932 when they were still in Boston, and moved here when the franchise moved to Washington in 1937.

He ended his playing days in 1940 to become line coach, and in 1946, '47 and '48, he was head coach. Last summer, when Billick Whelchel took over the coaching reins, Edwards became executive vice president.

According to Edwards, his duties consisted of public relations, scouting, and other paper work. Redskins President George Marshall said yesterday that Edwards' office will not be filled.

Edwards is 40 years old. He has two children, Betty, 5, and Beau, 6 months.

Terps Host To Leading W&M Tonight

Unpredictable Maryland has a chance to spring another upset tonight when it entertains Southern Conference leading William and Mary at 8:15.

The Indians come to College Park with a 2-0 record, and they'll play without Chet Giermak, their star center, who leads the Nation with a scoring average of 24.4 points per game. Giermak hurt his ankle in last Saturday's Washington and Lee game.

Maryland, after winning only one out of 10, upset highly regarded Georgetown last Saturday, 71-65. If the Terps can swing a similar upset tonight, they'll be doing an immense favor to G. W.

The Colonials currently boast a 4-1 Southern Conference record and are tied for second place with idle Duke. If Maryland upsets William and Mary, G. W. can move up into the lead by beating Virginia Tech in their game, also tonight, in Blacksburg.

Another D. C. team, Catholic University, hits the road to play Western Maryland in a Mason-Dixon Conference game at Westminster, Md.

William and Mary Coach Barney Wilson said yesterday that reserve center Frank Payne, 6-feet, 2-inches, will replace Giermak tonight, with John Renfro, Jere Bunting, Ed McMillan and Bob Benjamin rounding out the starting five.

Terp Coach Flucie Stewart will bank on the sharpshooting of Lee Brawley and Dick Koffenberger to put the skids under the Tribe. Brawley has a 15.8 average.

Sholl's Wins, 28-23

Sholl's Cafe defeated the U. S. State Department, 28-23, in a Girls' D. C. Recreation League game at Western gym, yesterday.

Crosby Given Golf Trophy

Los Angeles, Jan. 9 (AP).—Bing Crosby today was awarded the William D. Richardson Memorial Trophy by the Golf Writers Association of America for 1949's outstanding contribution to golf.

Charles Bartlett of the Chicago Tribune, secretary of the writers' association, announced that Crosby had won the trophy, a memorial to the late veteran golf writer for the New York Times.

Crosby walked away with the balloting, receiving 440 points from the GWA membership of 162 writers.

Crosby's wartime exhibitions, the tournament he staged single handed as a benefit for the family of golfer Ben Coltrin, who died three years ago, and other contributions to golf all combined to bring him the honor.

Clem Crowe Reported New Coach of Colts

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 9 (AP).—A spokesman for the Buffalo Bills football club said tonight he was informed Clem Crowe had accepted an offer to be head coach of the Baltimore Colts in the National-American League.

The spokesman, who asked not to be named, said Crowe had given notice the Baltimore job would make him unavailable to coach a Buffalo team if one is admitted to the merged loop.

Callers to Crowe's home in suburban Eden were told he had left and would not be back tonight. His whereabouts could not be learned.

Earlier tonight, Crowe said he had been interviewed by the Colts and was "waiting for word from Baltimore."

Titone Beats Dynamite

Charlie Titone, 125½ pounds, of Brooklyn, put on a strong finish to gain a unanimous 10-round decision over Washington's Little Dynamite, 127, in the feature bout at Turner's Arena last night.

A crowd of 1103 saw the more experienced Brooklynite use a clever left hand to give Dynamite his first loss in 17 pro fights.

Dynamite's best round was the seventh when the two slugged it out toe to toe and Titone was forced to give ground, but he tied Dynamite up for the rest of the round.

The semi-windup saw Gene Smith win his third straight since turning pro, but this one took longer than the others. It took Smith until 1:24 of the second to stop Tim Healy of New York last night. Smith won his first two by one-round knockouts.

Pat Thomas decisioned Manny Correa in a five; Carl Minnis t.k.o'd Sam Kelsey after 1:14 of the fifth of a scheduled five rounder, and Scott Richardson gained a four-round decision over Kid Wolfe in the other preliminaries.

Caps, Nearing .500 Mark, Tackle Stags Here Tonight

The Washington Caps take on their old National Basketball Association nemesis, the Chicago Stags, tonight at 8:30 at Uline Arena. The Stags own a 16-13 advantage over the Caps in a four-year span.

The Stags will bring an old Washington favorite back, in Kleggie Hermsen, whom the locals traded to the Stags after last season. The Caps received Chuck Gilmur in the deal.

Max Zaslofsky, with a 15.2 average, points up the Stag attack while Odie Spears and Andy Phillip are averaging 12.2 and 11.6 points.

The local pros, hot off their 101-83 rout of Waterloo, are out to pull up to the .500 mark by beating Chicago tonight and New York tomorrow night at New York. At present, the Caps have a 15-17 record.

Virginia's Johnny Papit Out of School on Medical Leave

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Jan. 9 (AP).—Johnny Papit, star fullback at the University of Virginia, is out of school on a "medical leave," head coach Art Guepe said today.

Papit, now at his home at Philadelphia, is expected to return February 1.

Guepe said that a staff physician of the university's student health department had recommended the leave of absence.

"Johnny was banged up several times during the season, and he was nervous and needed a rest," Guepe said. He added that the football star had left school in good standing and was not on probation.

Red Sox Sign Steve O'Neill As Supervisor of Scouts

Boston, Jan. 9 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox today signed Steve O'Neill, former Cleveland Indian coach, as supervisor of scouts in the Central States.

A native of Cleveland, O'Neill was famed in big league baseball as a catcher and later as manager of the Indians and Detroit Tigers.

AGUA CALIENTE, Mex., Jan. 9 (AP).—The second match race here next Sunday between Jockey Johny Longden and Mrs. Wantha Davis is off.

The Caliente race track said Longden, who was defeated by Mrs. Davis in a race last month, would not be able to come here for the second match because of Santa Anita engagements.

Apprentice Glen Lasswell, the track said, will race Mrs. Davis instead.

Fesler Gets Raise, Professorship And Decides to Stay With Buckeyes

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 9 (AP).—Wes Fesler decided today to remain as Ohio State University's head football coach.

In making his decision, Fesler accomplished two things:

1. Set at rest a six-week rumor that he would desert the Bucks for a $25,000 per year job in the business world.

2. Assured his future welfare and security by getting a $1500 raise to $15,000 a year, and a board of trustees promise of a full professorship in the physical education department, if and when he gives up the coaching job.

Bowler Shows It's No Fluke, Rolls Two Perfect Games In Row

NEW YORK, Jan. 9 (AP).—Johnny Bomba, a veteran bowler from Bayonne, N. J., accomplished the bowler's dream last night—a 300 game—and just to show it wasn't a fluke he followed up with another perfect game. The 36-year-old Jerseyite, defending his Staten Island individual classic title, blasted a total of 1508 pins in six games—the two 300 games coming at the end—to retain his crown.

Buck Deer Takes Last Swim in Bay

By Ralph Murdock

A few days ago, the crews of seven oyster boats were busily hand-tonging for oysters about 2000 yards off Holland Point. As one of the tongers glanced out into the Bay he spotted what appeared to be the limbs of a dead bush standing upright in the water and heading toward the oyster boat at a pretty lively clip. He assumed the small tree had fallen from a duck blind and was merely floating with the wind and an incoming tide. He kept right on working.

MURDOCK

A second peep showed the object coming closer and closer. He laid down his tongs, cleared his eyes and much to his amazement he discovered it was a deer. He yelled to his coworkers, "Look, there's a buck deer swimming in the water. See his rack above the surface." The incident just about stopped the oystering for the day.

Several schemes were hastily concocted to help the big buck out of his predicament. The first was to head the big fellow back to the western shore, but he had ideas of his own and showed a preference to continue up the Bay. As one of the oystermen, Basil Dadson, explained it, "I believe he was chased into the water by foxhounds, which we heard running on shore. We couldn't steer him back in that direction."

A second boatman suggested throwing a rope over his antlers and hauling the deer aboard. He figured that they could then carry the buck to shore and release it.

A third tonger quickly advised in no uncertain terms, "We roped a buck in the water two years ago. When we dragged him aboard he broke loose and chased everyone overboard except the two men who hid behind the engine house. After he had practically wrecked the boat, he leaped back into the water."

It was decided to let Mr. Deer proceed on his merry way. Sorry to state, the rest of his trip upshore was not very merry for his carcass was found about four miles up the bay from where it was first sighted by the Deale, Md., oystermen. The dead animal was discovered by muskrat trappers about 200 yards from Deep Creek.

Guepe Sought By 2 Colleges

Richmond, Va., Jan. 9 (AP).—The Richmond News Leader reported today that two other colleges are "more than casually interested in having Arthur L. Guepe, of the University of Virginia, as football coach."

The newspaper said it had learned from a reliable source that persons close to Holy Cross College have approached the 34-year-old Cavalier mentor. The other school interested in Guepe is the University of West Virginia which is faced with the possible loss of Dud DeGroot.

Highs Could Play There Before 2500

By West McLean
Post Reporter

Overlooked in the magnitude of the record $119,124,875 District budget presented to Congress yesterday was a long-sought $21,000 item to remodel McKinley gym for interhigh basketball games.

If appropriated, the money will be used to provide new exits to meet the requirements of the present egress law, and increase the seating capacity to 2500.

McKinley gym is, at present, limited to 700 spectators by the fire inspectors because of the lack of sufficient number of exits.

700 Seats in Balcony

A new seating plan puts 700 fixed seats in the balcony and 1800 folding seats on the main floor. The seats on the main floor will probably be of the pulldown, telescopic folding type, allowing them to be easily removed to give more floor space.

If the money is appropriated, the gym could be renovated in time for 1951 basketball season.

The proposed changes in the Tech layout would give the Interhigh league a home again. Last year the Highs played the majority of their games at the Armory, and this year, they are playing at Uline's Arena.

The objection to both the Armory and Uline's is the lack of night dates on which games can be played. Only two nights are available this year at Uline's, one for the playoffs and one early in the season.

Dunbar Plans Stadium

If the games could be played at McKinley the Highs could realize the attendance profits instead of having to pay for the use of another gym as is the case at Uline's.

Also on the new budget is a $200,000 request to acquire land adjacent to Dunbar High School to build a new stadium and fieldhouse to replace the present Brooks Stadium. The present stadium land would then be used to make room for an addition to the Dunbar gymnasium.

The new stadium will cost about $195,000 more bringing cost of the entire project to $395,000. Only $200,000 was requested.

The budget also has an item asking for the rebuilding of the Western High School gymnasium floor.

Hardiman Elected Hoya Captain

Tommy Hardiman was elected captain of the Georgetown University football squad for 1950 at a meeting last night. The Concord, N. H., junior was in the top 10 men in the country in pass interceptions last year and is considered one of the best defensive backs in the East, gaining honorable mention for the All-Eastern squad.

Georgetown's 1950 football schedule follows:

September 30—Penn State at State College, Pa.; October 6—Tulsa at Griffith Stadium; October 13 or 14—Maryland at Washington, D. C.; October 20—Boston College at Boston; October 27—Villanova at Philadelphia; November 3—Miami at Miami, Fla.; November 11—Fordham at New York; November 18—Holy Cross at Worcester, Mass.; November 25—George Washington at Griffith Stadium.

Olympic Group Decides

U. S. Will Participate in Baseball, 15 Other Sports in Pan-American Games in Argentina

Baseball will be one of 16 sports played by United States teams in the first Pan-American games next January in Buenos Aires, the U. S. Olympic Association decided at its closing session at the Willard Hotel yesterday.

It marks the first time that the Olympic group plans to send a baseball team into international competition.

Because the Argentine capital is below the equator, January is a summer month there, and playing baseball is feasible.

The U.S.O.A. decided that the United States will participate in basketball, boxing, canoeing, equestrian, fencing, gymnastics, pentathlon, men's swimming, women's swimming, track and field, water polo, weightlifting, cycling and rifle shooting, as well as baseball at Buenos Aires.

Frank G. McCormick, University of Minnesota, was named chairman of a committee to stage elimination tournaments to pick amateur players for the baseball team.

Joe Bertolini, of the District of Columbia A.A.U., was named chairman of the men's swimming committee.

Richard F. Vaughan, of Princeton, head of the ice hockey committee, said that his group will ask the International Olympic Association for permission to organize competition on a basis that meets the American definition of amateur.

At the 1948 winter Olympics, two United States hockey teams showed up at San Moritz, Switzerland, one representing the United States Olympic Association and the other the International Hockey Association. A credentials squabble ensued and the United States almost pulled out before the Olympic team was accredited.

Two Washingtonians were named to the United States Olympic Committee, consisting of about 90 men, who will control the association until its next meeting in 1954. They are E. Joseph Aronoff, former president of the Washington A.A.U., and Edward Rosenblum, current president of the local A.A.U.

Col. Harvey L. Miller was made treasurer of the Olympic Boxing Committee.

Hyattsville Wins 8th in Row, 51-45

The Hyattsville Hornets ran up their eighth straight win yesterday, stinging Eastern, 51-45, at Hyattsville.

It was a nip and tuck battle all all the way with Eastern leading, 11-6, at the quarter and 28-23 at halftime.

Hyattsville took over the lead in the third period as Bob Leaman hit for five of his 12 points and Wayne Adams contributed his five to the spree that put the Hornets ahead to stay, 40-37, at the three quarter mark.

Devitt trailed, 19-6, at the end of the first quarter, 28-14, at halftime, and 41-28, going into the last quarter. Then, Jack Bogley went on a 13-point scoring binge to spark Devitt's great rally. It was the fourth win against no losses for the Prepmen.

Bill Benning Says

Dear Folks:

Let's answer some inquiries: During 1948 when Citation won 19 of 20 starts (Saggy beat him) he was an odds-on favorite in every outing. If you want to mate a mare to Bimelech you'll have to ship her to the Greentree Stud, Lexington, Ky. Man O'War never raced against Exterminator. Jockey Buddy Root has ridden stake winners on big tracks. Among others he won the $10,000 added Southern Maryland Handicap at Bowie with Prefect in 1946. Preakness outdates the Derby but the Maryland Classic has not been run every year. Sunshine Park, at Tampa, is a mile track with a six-furlong chute. Upward of 500 dead heats were run during 1949. Before the advent of the photo finish they were a rarity.

VPI Won't 'Lie' to Hold NCAA Berth

Virginia Tech and the University of Virginia both have said openly that they cannot comply with the provisions of the code.

When football is not in full swing at Virginia Tech, the official asserted, "our players are under military control just as if they were in the Army. During the football season, we manage to get them excused from enough of the military activities so that they can practice football."

The University of Virginia maintains an athlete cannot practice sports, work enough to pay his own way and still have sufficient time to do what he enrolled for in the first place—study. Virginia has asked the NCAA to take a member-by-member record vote on the expulsion question if the convention votes on the matter.

Gloves in 4th Round Tonight

Fans viewing the fourth round of the Golden Gloves-AAU championships tonight at Turner's Arena may be getting a preview of the winner of the tourney's Outstanding Novice trophy when husky Paul Wallbank, of the Naval Air Station, faces CYO's Hunce Lanier in a novice division 160-pound scrap.

Despite the fact each lad has one tournament victory, the Anacostia sailor enters the ring a prohibitive favorite on the strength of his KO over Wilson Davis last week in 1:22 of the third round.

Twenty bouts, 11 of them in the senior division, are on tonight's card, starting at 8:15 o'clock.

Parr Elected Again to Direct Md. Jockey Club

Baltimore, Jan. 9 (AP).—Four new directors were elected today by the Maryland Jockey Club at its annual meeting.

Harry A. Parr, 3d, was re-elected president of the club, which operates Pimlico, Laurel and Timonium race tracks. Ten other board members were renamed.

Added to the board of directors were George E. Allen, of New York and Washington, former head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and John D. Schapiro, Clarence E. Tuttle and Benjamin W. Griswold, 3d, all of Baltimore.

After the meeting Parr said Pimlico would operate as usual this year. However, he indicated that the Jockey Club has not given up its plan to close Pimlico and consolidate its meeting with those of Laurel. The 1949 Maryland General Assembly refused to pass a bill which would have allowed the plan to be put into effect.

American Jayvees Beat Marines

Verdict Stands In Forced Prostitution

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday affirmed the conviction of a 23-year-old short order cook sentenced to 2 to 8 years prison for forcing his wife into prostitution.

The convicted man is Carl J. Hall, formerly of 231 8th st. se. He was charged with compelling his 19-year-old wife, Jean, to have relations with a chance acquaintance he had brought into their apartment.

Through his attorney, Harry A. Finney, Hall contended he was improperly convicted because it was not shown that he or his wife derived any financial gain. Also, since there was no evidence of any prior attempts to get his wife to engage in lewd acts, he said the conviction could not stand.

The Appeals Court, through Judge Bennett C. Clark, said:

"All that is necessary is that he place her to lead such a life. There is no rationale which could compel a contrary holding because otherwise the law would be in the unusual position of having to sit by and watch a wife be forced into several acts before it could proceed against the husband."

Bank-Bound Man Robbed Of $1300

A gunman wearing a dirty brown hat snatched a paper bag containing about $1300 from George A. Douglass, 39, a market owner, yesterday at about 10:45 a. m.

Douglass, who owns the Suitland Market, 4688 Suitland rd., Suitland, Md., told police he was held up when he alighted from his car in the rear of the Highlands branch of the National Capital Bank, 2337 Pennsylvania ave. se.

He said the bandit pressed a blue steel automatic against his chest and ordered, "Hand me that bag." Douglass said he handed over the bag which contained three days' receipts and the gunman fled up an alley.

Douglass and police searched the area but found no trace of the man.

Douglass, who lives at 4721 Homer ave., Suitland, Md., described the bandit as a white man, between 35 and 40 years of age, about 5 feet 9, weighing about 145 pounds, and wearing a brown overcoat and dirty brown derby.

His only announced plans after turning over the Governor's office to Governor-Elect John S. Battle on January 13 are to return to his law practice in South Boston.

Police Grill Handyman in Woman Death

Alexandria police last night still held Carl Blackwell, 62, for questioning in the mysterious death of Mrs. Edith Dix on December 30.

Detective Inspector Russell A. Hawes said the handyman will be held until "we clear up some other angles" about a drinking party attended by Blackwell and the dead woman in a Queen st. building where she was found nude and unconscious December 20. She died the following day at Alexandria Hospital of a cerebral hemorrhage.

Blackwell, booked for investigation, was living temporarily in the building whlie remodeling it for use as a fish market. According to police, he said Mrs. Dix "passed out" on a cot during the party and he left her unconscious after unsuccessful efforts to revive her.

Bank-Bound Man Robbed Of $1300

A gunman wearing a dirty brown hat snatched a paper bag containing about $1300 from George A. Douglass, 39, a market owner, yesterday at about 10:45 a. m.

Douglass, who owns the Suitland Market, 4688 Suitland rd., Suitland, Md., told police he was held up when he alighted from his car in the rear of the Highlands branch of the National Capital Bank, 2337 Pennsylvania ave. se.

He said the bandit pressed a blue steel automatic against his chest and ordered, "Hand me that bag." Douglass said he handed over the bag which contained three days' receipts and the gunman fled up an alley.

Douglass and police searched the area but found no trace of the man.

Douglass, who lives at 4721 Homer ave., Suitland, Md., described the bandit as a white man, between 35 and 40 years of age, about 5 feet 9, weighing about 145 pounds, and wearing a brown overcoat and dirty brown derby.

She died the following day at Alexandria Hospital of a cerebral hemorrhage.

Blackwell, booked for investigation, was living temporarily in the building whlie remodeling it for use as a fish market. According to police, he said Mrs. Dix "passed out" on a cot during the party and he left her unconscious after unsuccessful efforts to revive her.

The Federal Diary

28,000 Fewer Jobs Provided in Government Under Proposed Budget

About 28,000 fewer Federal jobs are provided in the 1951 budget which the President yesterday recommended to Congress.

The President proposed an average employment of 1,960,000 persons during the 1951 fiscal year to begin on July 1. During this year the number of workers is expected to average 1,988,000.

Federal employment is down more than 100,000 under what it was a year ago.

There would be little change in Federal employment here under the President's budget. In fact, it might increase a bit as many independent and old-line agencies were recommended for small staff increases.

As expected, the big decline in Federal employment would be in the military agencies — Navy, Army, and Air Force. The budget provides for an average employment of 725,000 civilian jobs in the military agencies. As of December 1, there were about 775,000 such jobs, an anticipated decline during the next 18 months of 50,000. Increases in other agencies would partly offset the reduction.

In his budget message, the President made these points of interest to Federal workers:

That Federal employes be brought in under the unemployment compensation system and $13,500,000 was earmarked in the budget to cover payments to them;

That the Congress create a self-supporting Government corporation to take over cafeteria and recreational facilities now operated on Federal property;

That the Congress approve recommendations he will make to improve the way the Government recruits, trains, and supervises its employes.

That the Postoffice Department be given the authority to maintain its own accounts and to conduct its financial affairs on a businesslike basis, and,

That the Postmaster General be given the authority to appoint postmasters. Postmasters are now appointed by the President and subject to Senate confirmation.

In addition, the President revealed he would send a number of Government reorganization plans to Congress to accomplish these two objectives: (1) To draw clear lines of authority and responsibility for the management of Federal activities, and (2) to more effectively group programs and activities within departments and agencies.

Outside the military agencies, very few departments and bureaus would have fewer employes than they now have under the President's budget. Among the exceptions would be the Displaced Persons Commission which would go down from 326 to 93 people, and the Home Owners Loan Corporation, from 376 to 268.

Scores of agencies would get funds to expand their staffs. These are among the most significant increases in "average" employment:

The International Revenue Bureau, to be increased from 53,598 to 57,965; Labor's Wage and Hour Division, 1383 to 2131; Bureau of Labor Statistics, price index survery, 275 to 552; Federal Bureau of Investigation, 9968 to 10,647; Post Office Department, an increase of about 2500 in its first and second class offices; War Claims Commission, 53 to 143; Tennessee Valley Authority, 14,109 to 16,721; National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, 7269 to 7785; and Securities & Exchange Commission, 1058 to 1135.

Also, Interior's Geological Survey would be increased from 4000 to 4679 employes; its Bureau of Land Management, 1031 to 1341; and its Reclamation Bureau would get expanded up and down the line. At Agriculture, its Forest Service would go from 6406 to 7065 employes; its Farmers Home Administration from 6056 to 6729; Federal Crop Insurance Corporation from 649 to 854; Solicitor's office, 522 to 647; and about 1500 would be added to its Production & Marketing Administration.

In addition, Housing & Home Finance Agency would expand from 364 to 685 employes, and its Public Housing Administration would increase from 20,400 to 21,465. The Federal Trade Commission would go from 670 to 734, the additional staff to be placed on antimonopoly work. The Bureau of Employes Compensation would be expanded from 457 to 501.

Could Be Bomb Shelters, Too

Underground Parking Plan Proposed to Advisory Board

A member of the District Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Board last night urged the group to investigate the possibility of building underground parking facilities which might double as atom bomb shelters.

The board member, Nathan M. Lubar, cited the underground garage between New Jersey ave. and the Senate Office Building as an example. Although Government operation of such activities is frowned on, he added, the Government might aid private sources to finance such a project.

"Although most of us smile somewhat at the talk of atomic bomb shelters, I am certain that if the occasion ever arose when we needed such shelters and none was available, there would be a tremendous loss of life," he said.

Would Aid Security

"Properly built by United States funds," the underground structures might not only aid downtown Washington merchants and shoppers but would aid Washington's "future security."

As sites, he suggested Franklin Park and Lafayette Square.

Lubar also suggested that the planted area in the center of New York ave., between 9th and 13th sts., could be used for parking without removal of the trees there. Between 200 and 250 cars could be parked in the space, he said.

To study both proposals and the relation of parking to traffic in the District, the board voted unanimously for a permanent committee on traffic to work with the Motor Vehicle Parking Agency.

Parking Meters Approved

The board opproved the proposed location of 750 more parking meters. As outlined by George E. Keneipp, director of Vehicles and Traffic, they will be installed:

On Connecticut ave. nw., between Calvert and McComb sts.; Calvert st. nw., from the bridge to 24th st.; 14th st. nw., from Thomas Circle to V st.; 7th st. sw., from D to G sts.; Pennsylvania ave. se., from 2d to 8th and L sts.; Good Hope rd. se., from Nichols st. to 15th st., and Nichols st. from Good Hope rd. to Howard rd.

Fare Increase Only Answer To CTC Problem, Citizens Told

By Sy Fishbein
Post Reporter

Because the Capital Transit Co. is a private company, the only way it can pay the recently granted wage increase and make a fair profit is to ask its passengers for more money, Vice President E. C. Giddings said last night.

Giddings told 30 persons at a meeting of the American University Park Citizens Association at Hurst Hall, American University, that Capital Transit is unable to make up its deficits from government treasuries as companies in other cities do.

Capital Transit accountants, he said, are working overtime to prepare figures for a fare increase request at the earliest possible date. Every day it delays in presenting its request to the Public Utilities Commission is costing the company money, he said.

The association yesterday released the results of a poll of its more than 600 members on the question of home rule for the District.

Of the 139 responding, 102 were against the Kefauver bill; 111 of 133 persons didn't think the Kefauver bill would be effective without national representation; and 91 of 128 didn't believe any similar plan would bring more efficient or economical government to the District.

Burleith

James A. McDonnell of 1934 38th st. nw., last night was elected president of the Burleith Citizens Association at its meeting in Gordon Junior High School, 35th and T sts. nw.

Other new officers include Carl F. Turvuy, vice president, and Mrs. Ila Gray, secretary-treasurer.

C. E. Wood and C. P. Wofford were named delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations. Don G. Harmer, C. O. Romborg, Mrs. V. L. Frederick and Mrs. Maxine Otero were named to the executive committee.

Gerard M. Shea, superintendent of the Industrial Home School, spoke on the institution's work.

Kalorama

The Kalorama Citizens Association, meeting at John Quincy Adams School, 19th and Columbia rd. nw., adopted a resolution last night opposing the "snow parking ban" now being discussed by the District Commissioners.

Glover Park

The Glover Park Citizens Association will take a stand on the Kefauver bill for home-rule at its next meeting, February 13, at the Stoddert School, 40th and Calvert sts. nw.

Principal speakers at the group's meeting last night were Mrs. Helen Duey Hoffman, of the League of Women Voters, who discussed the home-rule bill, and Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, assistant District health officer, who outlined Washington's "pilot program" for the care of the chronically ill.

Dupont Circle

The Dupont Circle Citizens Association, meeting at the Hotel Mayflower, yesterday voted to ask the Public Utilities Commission to establish streetcar stops at the north and south ends of the Dupont Circle underpass.

The association in other resolutions also urged that an escalator be erected and the Department of the Interior place a guard to protect the Dupont Memorial Fountain during the period it is being reerected on the site.

William Clark Taylor, chairman of the committee on taxation, gave the first of a series of three talks on District tax problems.

West End Citizens

The West End Citizens Association, meeting at the Third Precinct police station, K near 20th st. nw., last night voted to increase its annual dues from $1 to $1.25 to permit the Federation of Citizens Association's organ, "The Citizen," to be sent to all members.

Seven new members were also elected at the meeting, at which the president, Walter F. Wasson, presided.

Michigan Park

The Michigan Park Citizens Association, meeting at Whittier School, 5th and Sheridan sts. nw., last night in an unanimously passed resolution asked that the District budget be held to a maximum of one hundred million dollars, and that there be no tax increase.

In other resolutions the association asked: Repeal of the District personal property tax, on the ground that few pay it anyway; repeal by Congress of wartime excise taxes.

The associatio also unanimously voiced objection to any increase in streetcar and bus fares and to any reduction in service.

Georgetown Progressive

Horace W. Peaslee, a Washington architect, discussed a bill to protect the style of buildings in Georgetown at a meeting last night of the Progressive Citizens Association of Georgetown at Christ Episcopal Church, 31st and O sts. nw.

The measure, introduced in the House last year, would require approval of modifications to Georgetown buildings constructed before 1850.

Ivy City Association

The Ivy City Citizens Association last night voted to make another demand for traffic lights at West Virginia ave. and Mount Olivet rd. ne.

Meeting at the Crummell School, the Association also decided to have its president L. W. Crowe, call on John Dobbs, assistant commissioner of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, to get some help for all low-income families who received eviction notices yesterday.

The families were told they will be evicted from their war-housing homes at Fenwick st. and West Virginia ave. ne. on Wednesday. Crowe stated these families have been unable to find other housing.

Manor Park

The Manor Park Citizens Association, meeting at Whittier School, 5th and Sheridan sts. nw., last night in an unanimously passed resolution asked that the District budget be held to a maximum of one hundred million dollars, and that there be no tax increase.

In other resolutions the association asked: Repeal of the District personal property tax, on the ground that few pay it anyway; repeal by Congress of wartime excise taxes.

The associatio also unanimously voiced objection to any increase in streetcar and bus fares and to any reduction in service.

Guest, Police Exchange Shots Over Tenancy in Grocery

A policeman and a Federal building guard exchanged shots through the locked door of a grocery store early yesterday. Luckily, neither was hit.

Apparently each suspected the other of being an intruder.

Pvt. Charles W. Chaillet of the Ninth Precinct was checking stores on his beat at 4:15 a. m. When he tried the handle of the side door of the grocery store, at 833 12th st. ne., he heard a voice cry out from inside, "Who's there?"

"Police," shouted Chaillet.

This reply, said Chaillet, was answered by a bullet which came through the door and passed between the policeman's legs. Chaillet fired three shots in return.

At this point police cars arrived in answer to a telephoned report that someone was trying to break into the store.

Inside police found Joseph D. Salatto, 49, who identified himself as the brother of Lewis Salatto, owner of the store.

Joseph Salatto, a Federal building guard, said his brother had given him permission to sleep in the store. The .38 caliber pistol he fired had been placed in the store after a previous housebreaking.

Police charged Joseph Salatto with assault with a dangerous weapon but the charge was dropped after a conference yesterday morning at the United States Attorney's office.

Lano Guilty, Gets Year in Threat Case

Sentence Imposed By Judge Gray on Pinball Operator In Prince Georges

Dapper Sam Lano, Prince Georges County pinball machine operator, yesterday was found guilty of threatening a tavern owner and sentenced to one year in the Maryland House of Correction.

Sentence was imposed by Judge John B. Gray jr., chief judge of the Prince Georges County Circuit Court at Upper Marlboro, immediately after he found Lano guilty on one count of a two-count indictment. Lano had waived a jury trial.

Lano, who once was given a 5-year suspended sentence in New York on a charge of receiving stolen property, was accused of threatening John Duffy, a tavern owner of 4308 Rhode Island av., with criminal prosecution on bad check charges if the latter failed to continue to use Lano's pinball machines in his tavern.

In pronouncing sentence, Judge Gray said that only a technicality stood between Lano and conviction on a charge of threats of persecution made in an attempt to extort money, a felony.

Gray said Lano had not attempted to extort money but had used threats as pressure to get his machines placed. For this he was found guilty on the second count—a misdemeanor carrying a maximum penalty of two years. He was found not guilty on the felony count of the two-count indictment.

Duffy testified that Lano had lent him $1200 last July. This, Duffy said, was paid back in four checks of $300 each with the understanding that Lano would cash one every two weeks.

Instead, Duffy said, they were all presented for payment at about the same time and one of them was returned because of insufficient funds.

This incident, Duffy asserted, was used by Lano as a club to force him to resume using Lano's machines which he had discontinued. He quoted Lano as threatening that if the machines were not placed in use in the tavern "somebody will go to jail" on check charges.

Lano, taking the stand in his own defense, was asked if he had made the alleged threats. He shouted: "God Almighty, no! I'd never try to send anybody to jail."

After conviction and sentencing, Defense Attorney John F. Lillard filed notice of appeal and Lano's $5000 bond was continued.

Det. Mahaney To Head New Safe Squad

Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, yesterday announced formation of a new safe squad and police promptly were handed their first safe robbery in 10 days.

1937
Mahaney

In the past, safe robberies have been investigated by the general assignment squad headed by Lieut. Aubrey Tolson.

The new safe squad, first in the police department's history, will begin operating Wednesday. It will be headed by Detective Lieut. Michael J. Mahaney, who is being relieved of a desk assignment in the detective bureau.

Second in command will be Detective Sergt. Irving Lubore, veteran safe specialist from the general assignment squad.

Mahaney's desk job will be taken over by Detective Sergt. John O. Curtis who will become an acting lieutenant.

Also assigned to the new safe squad are Detective Sergts. William Freel, Warren E. Scott and Fred B. Ashe and Pvts. Herman A. Payne, Norman Grey and John W. Hayes.

Barrett said the new squad was created because of an increase in the number of safe robberies reported here in recent months.

The first safe robbery in 10 days was reported to police yesterday when David B. Gup, manager of the Consolidated Auto Investment Corp., reported $237 missing from the company safe.

The company has its office in Room 218 of the Bond Building 15th st. and New York ave. nw. Gup told police the money was apparently stolen by someone who knew the safe combination.

3 Police Transfers Disclosed by Barrett

Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett announced the following three transfers yesterday:

Pvt. Remy Ducote, who won a reputation as an ace investigator of hit-and-run cases for the Accident Investigation Unit, to the homicide squad.

Detective Sergt. Lloyd Furr from the robbery squad to the homicide squad.

Pvt. Mark W. Gray from the missing persons bureau to the robbery squad.

Jury Chosen For Trial of Holober

Insanity Plea Filed on Behalf of Alleged Wife-Slayer

Charles F. Holober, 40-year-old Washington jewelry clerk, went on trial for his life yesterday in Fairfax County Circuit Court, charged with the murder of his wife, Frances, 37, last February 24 at a remote nudist camp in the county.

Holober is accused also of burying his infant daughter alive in a shallow grave beside his wife but is not being tried for that crime.

Commonwealth's Attorney Hugh B. Marsh said he will ask for a first degree murder verdict. T. Brooke Howard, defense attorney, in his opening address to the jury, declared that because of Holober's "diseased mind he was not capable of determining right from wrong."

Howard warned the all-male jury that there would be conflicting psychiatric testimony.

Judge Paul M. Brown, presiding in the case, told the jury there is "no question" but that the "supreme penalty, death" will be asked in the case. He warned jurymen they could expect to spend two nights locked up in a hotel.

Holober sat motionless during the day. He only displayed interest when the clothing his wife was wearing at the time of her death was taken out of a cardboard box.

But he showed no emotion when Irving Garner, father of the dead girl, told of identifying his daughter's body at Arlington Hospital. "That was my daughter," he said, and broke into tears.

Dr. William Dolan, Arlington County pathologist, testified Mrs. Holober was about eight weeks pregnant at the time of her death.

The trial got under way at 10:15 a. m. and the jury of 12 men and two alternates was chosen at 12:55.

The jury was locked up for the night at 6:10 p. m. in the George Mason Hotel, Alexandria. The trial will resume at 9:30 a. m. today.

Bill Extending D. C. Rent Act Introduced

Representative Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.) yesterday started a move for continued District rent control by introducing a House bill to extend the present rent act until June 30, 1951.

Unless the Klein measure is approved this session by Congress, local rent controls will expire the end of June, as will controls nationally.

The one-year extension bill would continue the District Rent Act with one exception: It carries a provision to give relief to landlords who have not imposed rent hikes since July, 1941.

Klein's office explained the new clause was inserted to clarify a Municipal Court ruling which had the possible effect of discriminating against apartment owners who have not applied for increases since 1941.

The bill was referred to the House District Judiciary Subcommittee, headed by Representative Oren Harris (D., Ark.), who last week said action on local controls would depend largely on what happens to the National Rent Act.

Woman Pleads Guilty In $3000 Jewelry Theft

Mrs. Maude Brewster, 39, pleaded guilty in Prince Georges Circuit Court yesterday of the theft of $3000 worth of jewelry from the woman she worked for as a domestic. She admitted she pawned the gems for $155.

Judge John B. Gray, jr., postponed sentence until a police investigation has been completed.

Mrs. Brewster was arrested December 22 in Washington.

In Connecticut

Baby Left Alone in Auto Suffocates

The 5-month-old baby of a divorced Brentwood, Md., mother was suffocated when left alone in an automobile at Berlin, Conn., the Associated Press reported yesterday.

A local Connecticut medical examiner said the infant son of Mrs. Margaret Bryant Carter had died of suffocation after becoming wedged between a suitcase and the side of the car, while Mrs. Carter and her brother, Douglas Bryant, were in a roadside diner.

The medical examiner, Dr. L. A. Chotkowski, quoted her as saying she left the child in the car while she and Bryant ate at the diner, following which she returned to the car, found the baby still sleeping, and returned to the diner to warm a bottle of milk for him.

Mrs. Carter told police and the medical examiner that she had recently obtained a divorce and custody of the child in Maryland, and was en route to her parents' home in Freeport, Me., with her brother. She said her former address was 3734 Rhode Island ave., Brentwood.

Delay Perils Fair, Sesqui Group Told

The Freedom Fair is "in danger of dissolution" if quick action is not taken to get plans and activities under way once again, the Sesquicentennial Commission's executive committee has been warned by the man who holds the controlling interest in the Sesqui leasing bureau.

Leo M. Bernstein, in a letter to the executive committee, said "such an eventuality would in a sense be a national calamity." The executive committee on December 30 voted to recommend postponement of the Fair from this summer to next spring. Final action has yet to be taken by the full commission.

The leasing bureau, in which Bernstein and his associates have invested over $28,000 with no payment from the Government, was told to hold up on renting space to industrial exhibitors in the planned "U. S. A." buildings pending a review of all the commission's past commitments.

Bernstein sent the letter last Friday, warning delay should not continue more than a week from that date. It was read and entered on the minutes, according to Executive Committee Chairman Joseph C. McGarraghy, but no action was taken.

Suits Settled For Collapse Of Building

$1,250,000 in Claims For Empire Tragedy Canceled for $50,000

Suits for $1,250,000 damage growing out of the December, 1947, collapse of the Empire Building here were announced settled yesterday in District Court for $50,000.

The settlement will release the claims of 37 persons who sued as a result of the crash in which four persons died.

Still remaining to be litigated are the cross-complaints of the three defendants who seek to pin responsibility for the catastrophe on one another.

They are Nick Papanicolas who by the settlement agreement will pay $20,000 through his insurance carrier, the M. Cladny Construction Co., which pays $7500, and $22,500 more through insurance and the City Finance Co.

The exact shares of the individual claimants to slices of the $50,000 settlement are being worked out through two trustees appointed for the task. They are Julian H. Reis and Edward E. O'Neill, both of whom will serve without compensation.

O'Neill said the individual plaintiffs will receive sums ranging from $100 to about $6000.

The settlement was announced before Judge Alexander Holtzoff.

Although the sum was agreed upon at the opening of the afternoon session, there was some question as to whether under it Papanicolas, proprietor of the Empire Building, should release certain cross-claims. A recess was called and then the attorneys agreed to the settlement.

Under terms of the agreement, should the individual shares not be ascertained by the trustees, a judge will make the final decision.

2 Workers Injured Slightly When Ditch Caves In

Two men received minor injuries yesterday when a ditch they were digging for a water main caved-in in the 2800 block of Quebec st. nw.

They are Willie Brown, 40, of 1320 Levis st. ne., and William King, 53, of 1048 48th st. ne., both employes of the W. G. Cornell Co.

Brown was treated at Emergency for bruises to his right leg and released.

One of the men was buried over his head, but the earth was quickly dug away by fellow-workers so he could breathe until Rescue Squad No. 2 arrived, police said.

Virginian Stripped of Pants In Holdup; Suspect Held

Factually speaking Thomas C. Ashby lost his pants — his suit jacket, wrist watch and $60, too—in trying to get a drink early yesterday.

Ashby, 29, of Herndon, Va., a maintenance worker for St. Mary's Academy, Alexandria, told police this story:

He met two men about 1 a. m. while waiting for a bus at the Trailways Bus Depot, 12th st. and New York ave. nw., and asked them where he could get a drink.

They led him to an alley in the 1200 block of I st. nw. There they threw him to the ground, took the suit, money, and watch.

Shivering in his shoes and shorts, Ashby attracted the attention of two passing sailors, who called police.

Police equipped Ashby and gave him enough for bus fare to Herndon.

A crack in the case came about 4 p. m. when police—on suspicion—arrested Berkley Harold, 25, no given address.

During a routine search, a watch fell from Harold's watchband. It matched the description of the stolen one.

Harold admitted his part in the holdup, but said he waited just long enough to get the watch. His companion, he told officers, made off with the suit and money.

Arraigned before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence, Harold was held under $7500 bond on a robbery charge. The case was continued until January 18.

Fay Admits Recording in Building Up Gaming Case

Miss Franklin Told She Must Testify; Separate Trial Petitions Denied

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

United States Attorney George Morris Fay yesterday admitted that during his 18-month investigation of Washington gambling at least one telephone conversation was recorded.

Fay took the stand at a preliminary hearing in the lottery trial of William "Snags" Lewis, Attilio Acalotti and Frank Billeci. The hearing was called to determine whether certain evidence, alleged by the defendants to have been obtained by wire-tapping, will be admitted in the trial.

Fay has repeatedly denied that his investigators tapped any wires.

After the hearing was recessed until this morning, he said "I do not consider it to be wiretapping when one end of a telephone conversation is recorded with the knowledge and consent of one of the parties. I understand it to be wiretapping when a telephone conversation is intercepted without the knowledge of either party."

On Billeci Motion

Judge Alexander Holtzoff ordered the preliminary hearing on a motion by Myron G. Ehrlich, attorney for Billeci, a Washington Times-Herald circulation man at the time of his arrest last March.

Judge Holtzoff also disposed of three other motions in the Lewis-Acalotti-Billeci trial.

He ruled that the key government witness, Bernice Franklin, would have to testify in the trial. She had requested that a subpena ordering her to testify be quashed because she had become destitute and a "prisoner of process," after 10 months, 12 subpenas and 41 interviews as a Government witness.

Separate Trials Denied

Judge Holtzoff denied motions by Lewis and Billeci for separate trials. Neither wanted to be tried with Acalotti. Miss Franklin's former boy friend, who was convicted in Judge Holtzoff's court last month for threatening her while she was a Government witness. And Billeci did not want to be tried with Lewis, alleged ringleader of a 14 million-dollar-a-year gambling syndicate.

The trial of Lewis and 13 others on charges of conspiracy and lottery law violations ended in a hung jury on November 26. Retrial is scheduled for February 2.

In ordering Miss Franklin to testify, Judge Holtzoff said he "appreciated her difficulty" in being unable to keep a job because of the necessity of her frequent presence as a Government witness.

"Something ought to be done by the Government to get her employment," he told Assistant U. S. Attorney William Hitz, and suggested "informally" that the Government "get in touch with some welfare organization."

Questions Not Asked

Neither Ehrlich nor Charles E. Ford, counsel for Acalotti, asked Fay yesterday what information had been recorded or how the information had been used by Fay's investigators. Ford said he will ask these questions this morning.

Fay testified that the conversation was recorded "sometime last spring" in Miss Franklin's apartment at 1750 16th st. nw. Miss Franklin described the incident in the Acalotti threat trial.

Fay testified that he had never seen the recording device nor heard the recorded conversation.

Meanwhile, Miss Franklin's attorney, John R. Fitzpatrick, told the District Commissioners yesterday that his client's apartment had been ransacked and that she thinks she has been followed by policemen. He asked the Commissioners to inform him "immediately" whether any members of the police department "have had Miss Franklin under surveillance and for what purpose.

Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett said policemen were neither following nor protecting Miss Franklin.

School Board Okays Two New Buildings

Two new buildings that will relieve overcrowded schools in the Southeast section of the city were approved for occupancy yesterday by a committee of the Board of Education.

They are the Sousa Junior High School for white students at 37th st. and Ely pl. se., and the Birney Elementary School for Negroes at Sumned rd. and Nichols ave. se.

Students will move into the buildings as soon as equipment is installed, about February 15 for the junior high students and February 1 for the elementary pupils.

500 Students to Move

Five hundred students will be transferred to Sousa from Kramer Junior High School.

With occupancy of the new Birney School, the old structure at Nichols ave. and Talbert st. se. will be abandoned. Eight classes now on part-time will be put on a full day's schedule.

The new schools are of red brick construction and make maximum use of glass for natural lighting.

The Sousa, built at a cost of $1,688,000, contains 30 classrooms, ten shops, and instrumental music room with a tiered floor, two gymnasiums separated by folding doors, recreational facilities, an auditorium and cafeteria.

Golf Course an Obstacle

School board members who toured the building yesterday found it "very satisfactory" but said they will petition the National Capital Parks to relocate green seven of the Dupont Golf Course located about 150 feet from the school.

Forty-six windows in the school have been shattered by golf balls in seven weeks at a cost of $2000.

Birney School, costing $479,600, has 26 classrooms, two kindergarten rooms with doors leading directly to the playground, a library enclosed on three sides by glass, practical arts room, an assembly hall and a playroom.

Adventists' 'Visit' Plan Nation-Wide

Plans for a Nation-wide mass visitation program, to be conducted by laymen of the Seventh Day Adventist Churches, were announced yesterday at meeting of the Potomac Conference of the Church at Takoma Park, Md.

Elder Warren N. Wittenberg, home missionary secretary of the conference, said more than six million homes would be visited under the plan. March 4, June 3 and September 2 were named as days the church will visit homes on these days, he said, to encourage Bible for concentrated visits. Laymen of reading and church participation.

His announcement came during the first of a two-day conference now being conducted at the Takoma Park Church by 53 neighboring churches represented by more than 125 ministers and church officers.

Two suggestions for more effective church worship were issued at yesterday's meetings by church pastors.

Elder Daniel A. Ochs, president of the Columbia Union Conference, warned churches against debating political issues in the pulpit. That time, he declared, should be devoted to spiritual plans.

Elder Ned S. Ashton, pastor of the Sligo Seventh Day Adventist Church, also in Takoma Park, warned of what he termed "popular preaching." Book reports and current events, he said are good topics for discussion but the pastor's job is still to preach salvation rather than social gospel.

At 10 a. m. today Elder George Vandeman, ministerial associate of the General Conference, will continue the conference meetings with a discussion of la, evangelism.

Mrs. Bender Hopeful For Release of Husband

Mrs. Shirley Bender, wife of an American serviceman held in Communist China, said yesterday she was assured the State Department is planning new steps to free her husband.

Mrs. Bender talked with several officials at the department and said afterward she "feels much better" about prospects.

Her husband, Marine Master Sgt. Elmer C. Bender, and Navy chief electrician William C. Smith of Long Beach, Calif., failed to return from a flight near Tsingtao, China, on October 19, 1948.

That Wonderful Mild Weather To Return Today

The Weather Bureau called for mild weather in Washington today —a good 5 to 10 degrees warmer than yesterday's temperatures. Skies will be cloudy, however.

After an early morning drop to about 40 degrees, forecasters predict a high in the low 60's. Yesterday's low of 31 degrees came at 12:45 a. m. The high—55—came at 4:50 p. m.

To make a good forecast better, the Weather Bureau said there's no cold in sight for Washington at least through Wednesday.

Federation Asks Supervision Of Bus Pupils in Montgomery

A county-wide uniform system of supervision of pupils transported by buses was recommended to the Montgomery County Board of Education last night by the Montgomery County Civic Federation.

The resolution, adopted unanimously, asked that supervision be given during the waiting period before and after school sessions in the 93 school buses carrying more than 12,000 pupils daily.

The federation further recommended that the Board of Education consider having at least one faculty member at each school assigned to supervise pupil activity during the waiting period.

The resolution followed a report by Russell I. Whyte, chairman of the school committee, who said that although 24 new buses have been purchased they are still overcrowded and some children in the upper part of the county have to catch buses at least an hour before school opens.

In another action, the federation called upon county officials to deny pending application for rezoning property for apartment house use until the county council adopts a completely revised land use zoning ordinance.

The officials will also be requested to delay action on all new applications for reclassification of land for apartments until the adoption of a master plan for the areas concerned.

The federation also favored revival of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission's policy prior to 1949 which put maintenance of the water and sewer house connections from the main line to the property line under obligation of the commission rather than property owners.

The commission's recent switch in policy was called "contrary to public interest" and deplored by the federation.

Eleven Released From Overcrowded Alexandria Jail

Overcrowding of the Alexandria jail again became a blessing in disguise to a group of its inmates yesterday.

Eleven short-term prisoners were freed prematurely by Judge James Reece Duncan in Alexandria police court, after City Sergt. J. Frank Moriarity recommended their release to ease the burden imposed by congestion in the ancient structure. All were serving terms for drunkenness, disorderly conduct and minor assault and had from three to 15 more days to serve.

Yesterday's group brought to 37 the number of prisoners freed in the last six weeks because of overcrowding. Moriarity said the jail, originally designed to house 70 prisoners, now has 128.

Rider Would Bar Retired Officers In Service Sales

Retired officers of the Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force would be barred from selling "war materials and supplies" to the armed forces under a legislative "rider" proposed in President Truman's budget yesterday.

Officials said the provision recommended for inclusion in the 1951 defense appropriation act would extend to retired officers of these services legislation long carried in the annual Army money bills applying to retired Army officers.

It prohibits payment of any retired pay to a retired officer "who for himself, or for others, is engaged in the selling of, or contracting for the sale of, or negotiating for the sale of" such supplies to the armed forces.

Pentagon lawyers said there are comparable criminal statutes now on the books, but they are difficult to enforce. The Army rider has been construed not to apply to retired officers working for firms selling the Government where they are not involved in selling or negotiating for sales.

Co-Op Housing Program Is Opposed by Builders

A large segment of the Nation's private building industry came out yesterday in opposition to President Truman's proposal for a Nation-wide cooperative housing program for middle-income families.

About New Hands for Doll

My doll's hands are turning black. What can I do for them? I hope you can tell me. I would like to fix her hands if there is any kind of medicine that I need. I hope you will give it to me. I will pay for it. Thank you.
A YOUNG READER.

I have asked a gentleman at a doll hospital to tell me what can be done for your doll, and he says that when the hands turn black no medicine will fix them. But, your doll's hands can be changed for new hands which will not turn black. To do this you must take your doll to the doll hospital. There is one at 1009 19th st. nw., in Washington. How much it will cost will depend upon the size of the doll. New arms for the smallest size will cost about $3.

A. P. A.

Thank you!

Can you give me a recipe for pickled beets made from canned beets? R. G.

Pickled Beets from Canned Beets:

1 large can sliced beets (No. 3 size)
½ cup vinegar
½ to ¾ cup sugar (depending on how sweet you like them)
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground cloves

Pour juice off beets, put into sauce pan and add vinegar, salt, sugar. Bring to a boil. Add cloves and beets and boil for five minutes. Let stand in juice overnight, at least, before using.

I have heard that adding salt to the water in which corn is cooked will make the corn tough. Is this true of potatoes, green beans, dried beans, and other vegetables? R. G.

Salt, in the usual amounts used for seasoning, does not affect the tenderness (or toughness) of any vegetable. Most cooking authorities recommend adding salt at the beginning of the cooking period because it improves the color of the green vegetable and the flavor of all vegetables. In addition, the presence of salt throughout the cooking period tends to preserve the ascorbic acid (Vitamin C) content of the vegetable.

Where can I buy fireproof-treated material suitable for recovering a bed lamp? What book do you suggest for instructions and suggestions?—MRS. R. G.

There is now on the market a new lamp shade material which is a fiber glass locked in plastic. It comes in many lovely colors and designs and is ideal for the use you have in mind. Using this material it is possible to work out any lamp color scheme. It can be purchased at a hobby shop on Pennsylvania ave. which specializes in plastics. They will show you how it is applied to the shade frame. They also sell frames of all shapes. For further information I suggest you call the shop at Sterling 0783.

Can you give me a recipe for wilted lettuce? R. G.

Wilted lettuce:

2 medium heads lettuce
1 teaspoon sugar
½ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
4 to 6 slices bacon
¼ cup vinegar
1 hard-cooked egg, chopped

Wash, drain, and shred lettuce into a hot serving bowl; sprinkle with sugar, salt and pepper; mix with fork and let stand about 10 minutes to wilt slightly. Cut bacon in small pieces and fry until crisp; add vinegar, bring to boil and pour over lettuce, mixing lightly with a fork. Sprinkle with egg and serve at once. Approximate yield: Six portions.

Regarding your advice to L. J. S. concerning keeping a stainless steel kitchen lovely. Each night after doing the dishes we go over the stainless steel with lava soap and a soft cloth, rinse well, and dry thoroughly with a soft cloth. As you say, the patina develops with use. Also, we advise not opening cans, etc., without protecting the stainless steel with something such as a hand towel. Hope this will be of help to you.
K. C. G.

These are good suggestions. Thank you for sending them!

Sometime ago The Post featured a skirt pattern which called for only one yard of 54-inch material. Since I've thrown the paper away could you tell me where to send for this pattern? C. V.

The pattern to which you refer is an Anne Adams pattern which appeared in the December 3 issue of The Washington Post. It is Pattern No. 4614, comes in teenage waist sizes 24, 25, 26 and 28. It can be secured by sending 25 cents to Anne Adams, in care of The Washington Post, 131 Pattern Dept., 243 West 17th Street, New York 11, N. Y.

I have some red material from which I wish to remove the color to make a wall drape. I know that color remover is effective, but it becomes too expensive for the yardage involved. Do you know if I could obtain the various ingredients of a color remover to make up at home? C. D. S.

There are several color removers or bleaches on the market such as sodium perborate, hydrogen peroxide, and household bleach. Sodium perborate and hydrogen peroxide are safe to use on any material, but they would be at least as expensive as commercial color removers, possibly more expensive. If the fabric is cotton you could use household bleach inexpensively and effectively. The easiest way to do it is in the washing machine. For a machine full of suds use about three cups of bleach. Wash for ten minutes or so and rinse three times.

Spring Fashions Unveiled

'Curves and Curls' Still in Style

By Peggy Preston

NEW YORK, N. Y., Jan 9.—Ladies, please be reassured. Nobody wants us to look like 1925 flappers in 1950.

That goes for the men (who in a panel discussion here today voted thumbs down on the flapper-type beauty), and the designers who are currently showing their wares before the Nation's fashion editors at the Fourteenth Annual Press Week of the New York Dress Institute.

The latter would have us wear shorter, slimmer skirts, it is true, and crop our hair to the ear line. But their conception of an attractive 1950 woman is a far cry from what it was 25 years ago. In fact, we doubt if a real flapper would even be on speaking terms with Miss 1950.

MISS PRESTON

For this forward-minded lass of the mid-century is quite an individual, and the way she is shaping up would put an honest-to-goodness flapper to shame.

Here's the '50 Outline

HERE she is, in outline, as seen by the majority of stylists in Manhattan:

1. "Curves and curls" are still her slogan. She has no intention of discarding her world-famous figure with its fine, strong shoulders, trim waistline and long, shapely legs. Neither is she interested in a "boyish" bob.

2. She's asking for the most natural silhouette she has had in years. Generally speaking, the fashionable woman requires gentle shoulder lines, the waistline she was born with, and slim or full skirts according to the occasion. She wants no part of artificial padding in her clothes.

3. She has put her foot down on the notion of knee-length skirts. At present they are firmly planted at mid-calf length, the same as they were a year ago.

4. Her hair is cropped short, no longer floats around her shoulders. But she is favoring a cut that allows enough length for a few curls across the neckline.

5. Small hats, with side slants are her dish, but she leaves the deep cloches for women who want to be startling.

6. Her shoes are light as air, feminine and sometimes sparkling.

Picture Is Beguiling

ALL in all, she presents quite a pretty, beguiling picture. At least she has so far, in the opening day of the showings. Such important fashion dictators as Paul Trigere, who won this year's Fashion Critics' Award; Jane Derby, Tina Leser, Capri and Maurice Rentner have indorsed an abbreviated silhouette, borrowed a few fashion fads from the '20s and given them a new lease on life.

But the clothes are strong, modern, streamlines. None, as yet, has offered anything resembling a "sack" dress of 1925.

The Men Approve

IN ALL this the boys concur.

Lured on by scare headlines of a feminine revival of the figure and fashions of 25 years ago, a group of "men about town" gathered at the Waldorf Astoria today to tell fashion editors how they would like the "woman of tomorrow" to look.

Included were Peter Arno, Ray Bolger, Guy Lombardo, Basil Rathbone, Buddy Rogers and Deems Taylor.

To a man they blasted the flapper's unnatural silhouette, pleaded for no retrogression to shingled, bristly hair; flattened bosoms, boyish hips.

"We have enough men now," concluded Mr. Taylor glumly.

Mr. Lombardo wants the girls to stay "as sweet as they are"; and Mr. Rathbone shuddered at the thought of the loss of the waistlines. "It would be horrible," he cried. "I couldn't endure it.'

In discussing the horrors of knee-length skirts, Mr. Taylor reminded his audience that someone had already said that "a human knee is a joint, not an entertainment."

But woman-wise Buddy Rogers, husband of Mary Pickford, who admitted make-up improved a woman, was moved to ask plaintively:

:"What do men really have to say about women's fashions, anyhow? They'll wear what they want despite what we say."

GAY ENSEMBLE FOR BEACHES EVERYWHERE—From Tina Leser's collection of sportswear shown in New York yesterday comes this wool knit red and navy swim suit. The matching bolero sweater makes it perfect for January days on Florida's breezy beaches. And it will be grand for summer swimming as well. The suit is from Edwin H. Foreman's resort and spring collection

Unsophisticated Career Girl, 38, Has Offer Of Marriage From Lothario Type, 42, Whose Philosophy of Love Doesn't Match Her Ideas

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a professional woman 38 years of age, single for two reasons: 1. My upbringing was so sheltered and I was so immature in girlhood, that I was neither attracted by nor attractive to men in those years. 2. After my so-called awakening, I was tied down by a responsible job and family duties.

My early life was insecure and unhappy, but now I seem to have emotional awareness, normal development and social freedom. However, I am still a child when it comes to knowledge of men and the world. My strict moral code and conservative ideas about marriage, love and sex have cost me many an attractive beau and most men call me cold, but I know that I am not.

I feel that an understanding partner could help me put aside my strict self-discipline and become a good wife; but I have heard from so many of my friends that men want some kind of experience before marriage, as guarantee of the mate's capacity to love, that I am beginning to doubt myself and my whole philosophy of life; and that is my problem.

Man Betrayed Recent Amour

I HAVE a proposal of marriage from a man 42 years of age, who has a good position and is quite appealing, but he admits having had a rather violent affair with a woman who married someone else; and he says he distrusted all women until he met me. According to his version, the woman ruined his whole life and I've heard that he blames her for double-crossing him. Yet it seems that he was responsible. He refused to marry her when she was pregnant. The baby died. Then she broke with him completely and married someone else.

He seems to put great emphasis upon sex in his concept of marriage, with which I agree, but I tell him all things work out in time. He has tried repeatedly to "liberalize" my code, and I almost believe that he proposed marriage because he couldn't have me on other terms. Have I a chance for happiness with such a man? I know his life to date has been insecure, and I think I have helped restore his faith in himself. He is intelligent and has been good and kind to me. T. F.

Man's Philosophy Strictly Foolish

DEAR T. F.: To claim that sexual exercise is the principal substance of mate love (whether married or romantic love) is a foolish statement, in my opinion. Whether uttered by yokel or sophisticate, it is the credo of an infantile character, who thereby inadvertently admits that his emotional growth has stopped at the autoerotic or self-caressing phase of experimentation—a neurotic (or psychologically sick) denouement generally caused by lack of enlightened early care.

Dr. Paul Popenoe, director of the famous Institute of Family Relations in Los Angeles, Calif., reports in his quietly sagacious book "Marriage, Before and After"—published in 1943 by Wilfred Funk, Inc.—that premarital gluttons for sex usually reap disappointment and inflict unhappiness on that score in marriage. The reason for this is their self-centered emotional immaturity, which causes them to glamorize venery and by that distortion to miss the boat with leads to genuinely human love-relatedness, which has to do with joyous or reverent appreciation of personality, at least as much as enjoyment of body.

Thus your friend—let's call him George—seems disqualified to teach in matters of sex. However, if he has enough sense to accept the fact, herewith urged on his attention, that his anxiety and ignorance have conspired to "ruin" his relations with women to date, then perhaps he isn't a hopeless case. If he could drop his defenses and become humble and hopeful, as you are, in approaching marriage as unknown territory wherein each will need the other's help to find happiness, then a good conjugal relationship might develop.

Nothing's Proved by Sneak Affairs

A SNEAK AFFAIR is more than worthless as a presumed test of compatibility in the boudoir. What might have become a happy union if honestly nurtured in legitimate circumstances may be damaged beyond repair by sexual connivance in the early rounds of mutual interest. Also, what may be taken for imperishable grande passion in prohibited conditions very often is found to be a snare and delusion if it leads to marriage—because the majority of those who traffic in affairs are neurotic types who for one reason or another can only crave "forbidden fruit." Legal union blights their appetite.

Like all who have compromised their ideals confusedly, in sick pursuit of emotional comfort, George unconsciously despises himself and his fellow "sinners," and to the extent that you resist his automatic sex propaganda, to that degree does he "trust" your character and your system of values, even though he'd undermine them if he could. He is a pretty flimsy fellow; and if you marry, my advice is to build on your values and try to induce him to revise his.
M. H.

Two-Legged Veep Gets A Great Kick Out of His Four-Legged Namesake

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THIS spring our Kentuckian Vice President Barkley will have the most legitimate of excuses to go racing. Undersecretary of Commerce Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, who also owns the C. V. Whitney stables, has named his most promising 2-year-old "The Veep."

The colt, raised on the Whitney farm at Lexington, Ky., is the first foal of Enfilade, a fast-racing filly rated next to Elizabeth Arden's Beaugay as best of her age, and of Mahmoud, one of the country's first three leading sires which "Sonny" Whitney bought before the war from the Aga Khan.

Mr. Whitney picked the name "Veep" for luck and also, because the Vice President, a recent speaker at the Thoroughbred Association, made an outstanding, understanding oration. Though the Veep's racing debut is not set definitely, he'll probably show his heels first at Churchill Downs. Anyway, the two-legged Veep's getting a great kick out of his four-legged namesake.

Story Teller in the Groove

ONCE in the groove, Undersecretary Whitney can tell fascinating stories about his famous horses. Almost 20 years ago, when Equipoise was at the top of his sensational career, having won 12 straight races, including the Triple Crown, Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont, Al Capone telephoned from Chicago offering to arrange a special race against his own candidate. Specifications for the race were weight for age, a mile and a quarter, the purse $10,000—plus a $5000 trophy.

Mr. Whitney accepted the gage but couldn't himself be present.

Now Equipoise had previously suffered a foot injury which had kept him from running as a 3-year-old. One foot was contracted, the hoof flaky, shelly. It was difficult to keep a shoe on it and often in races the shoe was thrown. Yet the game animal continued, finishing with a badly bloodied leg.

The morning of the race Tom Healy, Equipoise's trainer, telephoned from Chicago.

"The old horse can't walk out of his stall," he said. "His leg's so bad he jumps if you touch it with a straw. Do you want him to run?"

"Sonny" thought a moment. "Have you seen his leg worse?" Healy admitted he had. "Then run him."

Besides the main contender Capone had entered two other horses, instructing their jockeys to interfere and rough up Equipoise. Bad foot or no, Equipoise, who had twice been disqualified from races for biting, was in his element. He kicked, shoved, bit—and won.

On a winter vacation two years later, Mr. Whitney was enjoying himself at the Bahamian Club when a waiter tapped him on the shoulder. "The boss wants to see you."

Mystified, Mr. Whitney was led to a back room where Capone, flanked by gunmen (one of whom later was involved in the Valentine Day mass murders), sat drinking champagne.

"I've always wanted to meet you," said Al. Then, he proceeded to talk with sincere admiration and knowledge of the Whitney stable, "What a great horse you had in Equipoise," the gangster sighed, "I want you to know how sorry I was for the roughing up I gave him."

Then, Capone, trying to make even more amends, continued, "I tell you what I'll do. There's a big fight coming up in Miami next week. You come along over, be my guest, stay in my house as long as you like."

Shortly afterward Capone was arrested. And Mr. W. regrets passing up the most intriguing invitation he ever received.

Long Way From Kentucky

THOUGH it never appeared in the news, the then Colonel Whitney accompanied the then Secretary of the Navy Forrestal on the Iwo Jima assault. They sailed on the assault convoy's lead ship and on D-plus-2 Day were allowed to land on Red Beach.

Fierce fighting was in progress scarcely half a mile away. They were under Mount Suribachi and watched the flag-toting Marines make their historic summit struggle. Shells began dropping around them with even greater intensity, until Forrestal, in imminent danger of being killed, was ordered back to the convoy ship which now rode many miles offshore.

Several hundred yards offshore they transferred from an LST to a gunboat where, in a small galley, they sat down to the first meal in over twenty-four hours.

In the midst of the meal an orderly, roaring above the boom of mortars, asked politely: "Are you Mr. C. V. Whitney who owns a farm at Lexington, Kentucky, and a famous racing table?"

When the colonel nooded, the orderly roared louder: "Would you object to meeting the cook?" Secretary Forrestal replied quickly, "No, bring him up!"

A tall, plump colored man, all grins, popped in. "Ah just wants to ask one question, sir." Then, as the ship lurched, he yelled, "How's Yankee Maid?"

Sonny Whitney was surprised, to say the least. Yankee Maid was one of his horses.

"How did you know about Yankee Maid?"

"I was her groom and took care of her for many, many years. I worked on your farm more'n 15 years." Then, as a terrific barrage of shells plopped around the gunboat, the cook bellowed, "All I want to do—is to go back to Lexington!"

Tour Shows Cathedral Change

Members of the Washington committee of the National Cathedral Association made a tour of the Cathedral yesterday morning, giving special attention to the building progress on the South Transept.

Scaffolding has recently been taken down there to reveal the east facade finished up to the carved stone balustrade on the triforium level while another is being erected for the purpose of starting work on the west wall. The Very Rev. John W. Suter conducted the tour.

NCA members later met for luncheon at the College of Preachers. Included in the group were Mrs. Montgomery Blair, chairman; Mrs. Angus Dun, honorary chairman; Mrs. Carroll Perry, Mrs. J. Blaise deSibour, Mrs. Harold Hinton, Mrs. Benjamin McKelway, Mrs. Frederick H. Thompson, Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, Mrs. James M. Barnes, Mrs. Raymond Cox, Mrs. Robert W. Wilson, Mrs. Stuart Symington, Mrs. James Wadsworth, and Mrs. Leonard Elstad.

U. S. Told to Buy Foreign Goods

By Genevieve Reynolds

ECONOMIC COOPERATION ADMINISTRATOR PAUL HOFFMAN yesterday urged American women to buy foreign goods when they appear on the shelves as "a contribution toward the stabilization of world economy."

Mr. Hoffman spoke at a luncheon meeting of the Woman's National Democratic Club at the clubhouse, 1526 New Hampshire ave.

Scouting the fear expressed in some quarters that foreign goods will flood our markets and endanger our own economy, Mr. Hoffiman predicted that it would be a long time before Europe can send more than a trickle of goods.

On the contrary, he said that the U. S. has failed to meet the problem of Europe's dollar shortage realistically. He believes Europe should be helped to earn dollars through trade, rather than by expensive U. S. subsidies.

He believes that Europe can increase dollar earnings by increased productivity, improving marketing methods and increasing sale of goods in areas where goods are bought with dollars.

Must Reduce Tariff

ON THE other hand, he thinks America must help by speeding up tariff reductions; by abolishing unduly restrictive customs procedures, and by removing Federal, State and local laws prohibiting public purchase of imported products.

Hoffman meanwhile called upon the women of the Nation to urge Congress to appropriate about 3 billion dollars to continue present emergency aid to Europe.

He told the some 200 club women that the program will end by June 30, 1952, but that 3 billion dollars would be needed this year and 2 billion dollars next year to complete the program.

Pronouncing the Marshall Plan's first 21 months successful, he warned that the job is only half done.

Two Tasks Remain

ACCORDING to the ECA Administrator, two major tasks remain to make the program enduring.

These tasks, which he said he outlined in a recent talk in Paris to the Organization of European Economic Cooperation are:

1. To balance Europe's dollar accounts so that Europe can buy raw materials and other items which mean employment and better living.

2. To build in western Europe a more dynamic expanding economy which will promise a steady improvement in the conditions of life for all its peoples.

Hoffman emphasized that economic integration of Western Europe is a practical necessity to full recovery. To speed the program he said that he asked OEEC to reduce trade barriers inside Europe, to coordinate monetary policies and adjust exchange rates, and to eliminate dual pricing.

Dollars Must Balance

HE described Europe's economy as "17 separate compartments," with each country trying to be self-sufficient. Such an economy he believes keeps living conditions low.

To help Europe help herself, which is ECA's goal, Europes dollar accounts must be balanced, he emphasized.

The ECA administrator said that Europe's dollar gap is not new. He pointed out that the dollar shortage began 36 years ago and had increased over the years. Instead of permitting Europe to earn dollars through trade, the U. S. A. had attempted to solve the problem with 52 billion dollars in subsidies over a period of 36 years.

Advocates Travel

TO increase international understanding and dollars for Europe, he advocated vacations on the Continent. With airplane travel and reduced costs of traveling, he insists that two-week vacations in Europe are feasible for many Americans.

The ECA administrator said he agreed with the Harvard scholar, Dr. Arthur M. Schlesinger, on the greatest single event between 1900 and 1950. He said that it was the reluctant acceptance by the United States of world leadership and its emergence as one of the two dominant world powers destined to shape the future of mankind.

"I personally believe that what happens in the next year will have an overpowering influence on the destiny of the world," he said. "It will be determined whether free men can build a better world or whether it will be a dark age of enslavement with misery and despair the common lot of man. When you look back on history you see that less than 3 percent of peoples know the kind of freedom we have in America."

Hoffman said t hat ECA had asked for a total of 15 billion dollars. Ten of the amount already has been spent. But a total of 5 billion more is needed to finish "the greatest Christian adventure the USA has ever made." He pointed out that nobody knows the exact cost of the shooting war but that Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray estimated the total would be over 3 trillion.

Mme. Raza Addresses Twentieth Century Club

IF THE people of the Kashmir were permitted a free plebescite, they would become part of Pakistan. So declared Mme. Raza, wife of the Military Attache of the Pakistan Embassy, in a speech before the Twentieth Century Club yesterday.

She said that 80 percent of the population of the Kashmir are Moslems, as are the majority of people in Pakistan.

Mme. Raza said that 80 percent of the people of Pakistan would not accept the accession of the Kashmir to India. She said that the Mahrajah of the Kashmir acceded during a truce or "stand still agreement," and that at the time of the accession he no longer was the representative of the Kashimir.

Republican Women Hear GOP Issues

REPUBLICAN planks in the midterm campaigns this year will be drawn clearly along at least five major issues, Representative Herter (R., Mass.) stated yesterday.

In his address before the D. C. League of Republic Women, the Congressman predicted principal issues in the coming elections will be:

1. Old-age pensions and survivor insurance, provided for in the Republican bill H. R. 6000;

2. The Taft-Hartley law, and more specifically its clauses banning the closed shop and providing for presidential injunction when public helath and safety are in danger;

3. The Republican sponsored National Health bill, which party members call an "alternative to socialized medicine;"

4. Tax revision, and

5. The Hoover Commission, recommendations, all of which the Republicans are anxious to see passed. "But we're not too optimistic for their passage during this session," comments Congressman Herter.

Mrs. Edward Cafritz, president of the newly organized Washington Chapter, National Woman's Committee of Brandeis University, chats with University President Dr. Abram Leon Sachar at the tea given in Dr. Sachar's honor yesterday at the Shoreham Hotel. The university president compared the founding of Brandeis a year and a half ago with the foundings of Harvard and Yale. Pointing out that all three began with very modest endowments, he predicted that Brandeis would become one of the Nation's outstanding universities.

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

THE "June in January" song is ended. Winter, it seems, has set in. And so, those who can are heading for the golden sands of Florida, the blue waters of Bermuda.

Business brings him to Washington for short trips and frequently guests come down from the Capital for a holiday cruise.

Rumeli Hisar, Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor's winter house at Coconut Grove, is being readied for their arrival next Wednesday and Dr. and Mrs. John Oliver LaGorce are leaving on Wednesday for Miami Beach, where they've had a house for a number of years and where Dr. LaGorce will play golf at the club named for him—The LaGorce Country Club.

What More Could Any One Hope For

She'll come back to her apartment at the Mayflower the middle of February.

Gas Company Plea to Drop Suit Denied

The Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday lost the first round in its District Court battle to stay in the gas appliance merchandising and installation business.

Judge David A. Pine refused to dismiss the suit brought by John G. Webster & Sons, a dealer, for a writ forbidding the company from any activity other than the manufacture, transportation, distribution and sale of gas. Trial of the case on its merits has not been held yet.

Through Attorney W. A. Roberts, Webster charged the company is engaged ilegally in the plumbing business and is in the appliance business in violation of its charter.

Pittsfield, Mass., Jan. 9 (U.P.).—Fire Chief Thomas Burke today banned a drugstore's new concoction, the flaming nut sundae, as a fire hazard.

The hot fudge and marshmallow sundae, topped with three drops of lemon extract and ignited, then served by counter girls wearing firemen's helments, "might be dangerous for folks wearing celluloid collars or fur coats," Burke ruled.

Public Invited To See Color Video Tests

First public showing anywhere of color television will start here Thursday, the Columbia Broadcasting System announced yesterday.

Color television will be visible over receivers installed on the ground floor of the Walker Building, between G and H at 734 15th st. nw.

There will be half-hour broadcasts at 11 a. m. and 1 p. m. Mondays through Saturdays during January.

Fashion shows, music and other features will be shown. The broadcasts will originate in the studios of Radio Station WTOP and be broadcast over TV Station WOIC.

Eight receivers with 16-inch screens are being installed for the demonstration. Research specialists will check public reaction.

Complimentary tickets will be available at The Washington Post, main floor desk; Mayflower Hotel, cigar counter; Statler Hotel, assistant manager's desk; Willard Hotel, desk and newsstand; Carlton Hotel, front desk and newsstand; Stations WOIC and WTOP and at the Walker Building.

Heretofore, color broadcasts have been restricted to representatives of Government and industry, and to doctors, who have watched demonstrations of surgical and medical procedures at conventions.

The project is part of a test operation requested by the FCC. Other tests are being conducted in New York.

Jaycee Aid Requested in Traffic Woe

Vehicles and Traffic Director George E. Keneipp yesterday suggested that the Junior Chamber of Commerce might work on solving the parking situation as the No. 1 traffic problem of the District.

He made the suggestion in answer to a request from the Junior Chamber's traffic and safety committee for ideas on traffic improvement projects which the chamber might adopt for future action.

Keneipp, who met with the committee yesterday for the third time at the Burlington Hotel, said the chamber might be able to stimulate private enterprise to provide more fringe parking lots and other off-street parking.

Another suggestion from the traffic director was for the Junior Chamber to promote a safety education campaign to help the public understand the reasons behind local traffic regulations.

Charles R. Clemson, committee chairman, said his group would study the suggestions and make later recommendations on action.

'This I Remember'

Al Smith, Raskob Persuaded Roosevelt to Run for Governor

This is another installment of the serialization of "This I Remember," the nonfiction best seller in which Eleanor Roosevelt tells the story of Franklin D. Roosevelt's career, from 1924 to his death in 1945. Succeeding installments will be printed in The Washington Post through February 4.

By Eleanor Roosevelt

THE afternoon before the nominations were finally made, Mr. John J. Raskob, then chairman of the National Democratic Committee, and Governor Smith asked me to come to talk to them. This was no surprise, for I had heard that Governor Smith wanted my husband to run for Governor. However, I knew Franklin felt he should continue his treatments at Warm Springs. They told me how much they wanted my husband to run and asked me if I thought it would really injure his health. I said I had been told by the doctors that if he continued with his exercises and swimming at Warm Springs he might improve somewhat. My husband himself once laughingly said if he lived long enough he might be able to walk again, but progress was slow. Privately I sometimes wondered how much more could be achieved.

Both Governor Smith and Mr. Raskob insisted they did not want to urge anything that would jeopardize Franklin's recovery. If, however, it was not simply the matter of his health but other reasons which kept him from consenting, they would like to know. I said I did not think any other reason—other than the possibility of making further improvement in his health — was paramount. Having undertaken a heavy financial responsibility in Warm Springs, he felt an obligation to try to make it a success.

Franklin had put a great deal of his own capital into Warm Springs, far more than probably was wise. Nevertheless it was his great interest, and I never questioned anything he wanted to do with his own money, since I felt that was strictly his business.

Mr. Raskob and Governor Smith questioned me closely about this, and Mr. Raskob asked whether it would have any effect upon Franklin's decision if he were relieved of all financial anxieties. I told him I was sure it would not. Later, when Mr. Raskob talked to my husband, he offered to lend him for a year a large sum of money if that would make it possible for him to run for Governor. Franklin did not consider this loan, but in October of 1928 Mr. Raskob gave $25,000 to Warm Springs.

Franklin originally lent to start Warm Springs $201,677.83 and received a demand note for this sum dated February 29, 1928. This was paid back by the Foundation, some time after his death.

The Governorship

FINALLY, after Governor Smith, Mr. Raskob and I had talked over the situation, they inquired if I would be willing to try to get my husband on the telephone and ask him to run for Governor. They had not been able to reach him all day. I answered that I would not ask him to do anything he felt he should not do, let alone run for office. I never felt it right to try to influence decisions of this type. I told them, and I certainly did not feel it would be right at that time. I insisted that he must make his own decisions, but I said I would be willing to try to get him on the telephone.

We parted for a few hours. They put in a call for me to my husband early in the evening and found that he had gone to Manchester, Ga., to make a speech. He could not, we were told, be reached until he returned to Warm Springs . . . I finally succeeded in getting him on the phone after his return to the Foundation. He told me with evident glee that he had been keeping out of reach all day and would not have answered the telephone if I had not been calling. I had just time enough to tell him I had called because Mr. Raskob and Governor Smith begged me to, and that I was leaving him to Governor Smith. Then I ran to catch the train.

I can still hear Governor Smith's voice saying, "Hello, Frank," as I hurried from the room, gathered up my belongings and started for the train. I did not know until the following morning when I bought a newspaper that my husband had been persuaded to accept the nomination. I never heard him say later whether he regretted his decision. Having decided, he put any other possibility out of his mind.

I sometimes wonder whether I really wanted Franklin to run. I imagine I accepted this nomination and the election that followed just as I had accepted most of the things that had happened in life thus far; one did whatever seemed necessary and adjusted one's personal life to the developments in other people's lives.

Louis' Misgivings

LOUIS HOWE was not happy about Franklin's candidacy because he always thought in terms of the future. He had planned that Franklin should be a candidate four or eight years hence. Louis feared that if Governor Smith lost nationally it might spoil any chance Franklin had for future political office.

I used to laugh at Louis and say one could not plan every move in this world—one had to accept circumstances as they developed. This was one thing that Louis hated to do. He liked to feel that he dominated circumstances and, as far as it was humanly possible, he did.

Comparatively speaking, I knew very little about the 1928 campaign for Governor. Since I had started to work in the national office, my huband felt I was obligated to continue there, and that took the greater part of my time. I did go to hear him speak occasionally, and he made a very complete campaign throughout the State.

I think he did not expect to carry the State if Governor Smith lost; when we left the State headquarters at a very late hour on election night, we were still uncertain of the outcome. The next morning the final figures were in, and my husband was Governor-elect of the State by a very narrow margin. I think he had a feeling that it was a great tribute to him to have been elected when Governor Smith, who had such a great following in the State, had been defeated.

On that election night I visited national as well as State campaign headquarters. I thought Governor Smith accepted his defeat very gallantly. Though he never showed it in any way, it must have been hard for him to see Franklin elected.

Many people have suggested to me that, when Governor Smith asked my husband to run for Governor of New York while he himself was running for President of the United States, he believed he still would be able to direct the work of the Governor.

I doubt very much that that was true. I think he felt, as most men do when they are running for office, that he was going to win. How could he have expected to watch very closely what went on in the State if he were to be in Washington?

After his defeat, however, I think he may have felt that he would remain in close touch. One of the ways in which he undoubtedly expected to keep his hold on the State government was through Mrs. Belle Moskowitz. He suggested a number of times to my husband that she would be invaluable to him. Each time Franklin replied that, while he had great respect for Mrs. Moskowitz's ability and knew what her advice and help had meant to Governor Smith, he still felt it would be unwise for him to retain her in his own close administrative circle. The reason for his feeling was very simple. He thought it impossible for anyone who had worked so long with someone else to transfer her loyalty.

GOVERNOR Smith had asked Franklin to nominate him for the Presidency and to run on the State ticket as Governor because Franklin could bring him strength which he needed. However, I think Governor Smith did not have much confidence in the Harvard man—a man with a different kind of education, who cared about many things which meant little or nothing to Governor Smith.

There are two kinds of snobbishness. That of the man who has had many opportunities and looks down on those who lack them is usually recognized by all. The other kind of snobbishness is rarely understood, yet it is real. It is that of the self-made man who glories in his success in overcoming difficulties and admires greatly people who have achieved some of the things he considers of importance. Governor Smith, for instance, respected people who had made a success in business through their own efforts or made a name in the world in spite of modest beginnings. I think he tended to look down on a man who had not met and conquered the same situations that he himself had. Because Franklin was a man of moderate wealth and had always had a comfortable life. Governor Smith could not believe that he was as understanding and able a person as if he had been self-made.

In many ways Governor Smith did not know my husband. One of Franklin's main qualities, of which Governor Smith was apparently unaware, was that he never assumed any responsibility he did not intend to carry through. It never occurred to Franklin that he was not going to be the Governor of New York, with all of the responsibility and work which that position carried. That ended the close relationship between my husband and Governor Smith, though there was no open break so far as I ever knew.

My husband had some very clear ideas about State government. He studied the reorganization plans which had been initiated under Governor Smith, and I think he approved practically everything that he had done. Franklin personally had more interest in soil conservation and forestry.

The objectives that were later developed in the national Government were already apparent in Franklin's approach to questions in the State.

As Governor, Franklin showed his interest in labor and his belief in labor's rights. He felt it should receive the same consideration management received, and when times became hard the theory that government had a responsibility toward the people was inaugurated in State policies. Franklin has been accused of giving labor too much power, but his effort was simply to equalize the power of labor and capital. Being a close student of history, he knew how unhampered capital's power had been during some previous administrations.

Political Satisfaction

ONCE BACK IN public office, Franklin's political interest and ambitions awakened. I am sure that when he found he could again have an active part in politics he took a satisfaction in the purely political side of the struggle, in achieving new office. It is hard to disassociate his ambition and enjoyment of the science of politics for its own sake from his desire to achieve through political action real gains for the people—first of the State, then of the Nation and, finally, of the world. These objectives, of course, grew as circumstances developed, and our horizons broadened as we, as a Nation, were swept into a position where the world was depending on us.

As was to be expected, the work in Albany proved invaluable as background for the responsibilities to come. Franklin had the experience of working with legislative groups in which his political party was in the minority. Later, in Washington, I often wished that it were possible for him to carry out with the Democratic representatives there — even though the party was in the majority—the kind of educational work he had done in Albany.

The years in Albany cast their shadow before them. Frances Perkins was in the New York State Labor Department, Harry Hopkins was doing a job on relief and welfare, Dr. Thomas Parran was Commissioner of Public Health, Henry Morgenthau, jr., was Conservation Commissioner. Many experiments that were later to be incorporated into a national program were being tried out in the State. It was Franklin's political philosophy—and over and over again I heard him expound it—that the great advantage of having 48 States was the opportunity each one provided for experimenting with a program on a small scale before trying it out nationally.

We Love Our Boss

The boss looks mighty tough at times . . . But now and then it seems . . . His heart is sentimental and . . . He does enjoy his dreams . . . Especially when we recall . . . The day he started life . . . Or mark the years that he has shared . . . With his beloved wife . . . A sudden birthday party or . . . An anniversary . . . Will make him just as gentle and . . . As sweet as he can be . . . And so we keep a record of . . . The dates that mean the most . . . And always we are quite prepared . . . To drink a healthy toast . . . And always we are happy and . . . We do not mind the price . . . Because the boss who looks so tough . . . Is really very nice.

Count the letters in your first name. Subtract four if the number is six or more. Add three if the number is less than six. Then you have the key number. Check each key number left to right. The letters under the checks form a message.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Even Drew Pearson Is Scooped on This Prediction

Some alert guesswork plus judicious use of several dictionaries to establish a "ratio" lead Lieut. Andrew B. Oliver to predict:

"The message that Steve Roper received was 'Woman here' has given birth to sextuplets'."

Lieutenant Oliver says his guess is strengthened by the tipster's remark that he got the story from the "delivery boy." Hmmmm. Any other guesses?

OR COPYREADERS

H. Jayne Greene of 2140 N st. nw. embarrasses the daylights out of me by demonstrating that I've forgotten my Washington Irving.

She points out that a story by Post Reporter Peggy (Latest Fashions) Preston referred to "Rip Van Winkle and his mischievous elves"—and then stumps me with:

"But nowhere in the story did Washington Irving refer to them as elves. Do you remember what he did call them?"

Hmmmmm! Not elves, eh? Brownies, maybe? Dwarfs? Seems to me the illustrations in the book showed funny little men who might have been either elves or dwarfs. In most jurisdictions, elves run to a very small size and are almost indistinguishable from the Seven Dwarfs or any of the other well-established pixies.

But District Liner Green puts a stop to my guessing with the statement that Irving called these creatures nothing more revealing than "strange beings." Which certainly doesn't tell us very much about them.

With no better identification than that, they may very well have been a bunch of columnists.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Beautiful, intelligent half-grown male kitten; black with unusual white markings." (Michigan 8331, between 6 and 7 p.m.).

"Two 6-month-old cats, excellent mousers, used to children; will deliver." (Laurel 767-J-1.)

"Two female puppies, 6 weeks old, just dog but maybe some collie; will deliver." (Executive 0100, extension 182, from 9 to 5.)

"Mother dog, two cute 7-week-old puppies, and 1-year-old male dog, cross between hound and police." (Overlook 1709.)

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

This group riding of which you write—when does it happen, and why?

When I take a taxi, it's because I have a bunch of bundles, or luggage. Or maybe I'm just dog tired.

Don't I have a right to ride in private and comfort if I'm willing to pay the full fare?

George Peterson
3328 Reservoir rd., nw.

Dear George:

On the back of the zone map displayed in all cabs, you'll find the covering PUC regulation.

It states that group riding shall be in force at all times, day and night, regardless of the hacker's preference, or his passenger's.

The rule is ignored more times than it's honored, and most hackers will tell you it's unreasonable under present conditions.

But that's neither here nor there. It's still on the books, and subject to enforcement.

NO GADGET NEEDED

Tucked away in the women's pages is a little cartoon feature entitled: "My Wife Wants." The other day, "My Wife" wanted a gadget to indicate whether the extremely quiet motors in modern cars are running or stalled, for ready reference at stoplights.

C. B. Pinckney of Hyattsville, Md., points out that such a gadget is completely unnecessary. When the motor is running, the oil gauge will show some degree of pressure. Unless, of course, the lady happens to be out of oil.

And in that case, the temperature gauge will no doubt reveal that the motor is not only running, but quite hot.

SUGGESTION BOX

Why doesn't the Capitol Theater reserve one spot on its stage bill for local talent each week? It would provide a tremendous incentive for Washington young people with theatrical ambitions.

HONEYMOON'S END

We give to a new car our constant devotion . . . And polish and shine it with all kinds of lotion . . . But this care that we give it, so loving and tender . . . Will end on the day that we dimple a fender.

Jean Broulik
3850 39th st. nw.

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—A few days ago A. V. Alexander, the British Labor government official, was elevated to the peerage. Alexander's becoming a viscount will necessitate a serious change in the mast-head of Reynolds News. This is the newspaper owned by the cooperative retail store movement headed by Alexander. Its mast-head features a phrase directed at the two press lords, the Daily Mail's Lord Rothermere and the Express' Lord Beaverbrook. And now that Alexander has become a peer, the phrase will have to be eliminated—the phrase which announced that Reynolds News is "The Paper Without a Peer."

The drama reviews on "The Member of the Wedding" hailed the magnificent performances of Ethel Waters, Julie Harris and Brandon De Wilde, and paid full tribute to Harold Clurman, the play's director. Clurman's prime concern came a few minutes before the curtain went up at the Philadelphia tryout. The 8-year-old Brandon, who never had acted before, suddenly began to weep and insisted that he couldn't go on. Clurman finally roared at him—about the people waiting to see the show, that they mustn't be disappointed, and then he used some of the cuss-words the boy recites in the play. Brandon went on and, as he did in his Broadway premiere, read his lines perfectly. "Clurman did such a good job," said Carson McCullers, who wrote the play, "by treating Brandon like an adult and Ethel Waters like a child."

Clurman's next assignment will be the staging of "The Bird Cage," in which Melvyn Douglas will star. There was an announcement that Clurman's wife, Stella Adler, had been signed to play the feminine lead. The actress, however, has changed her mind and says that she will not play the role . . . "But you signed a contract," she was reminded . . . "So I did," replied the director's wife. "But under the law a husband can't force his wife to do anything against her will—especially on a stage."

Hoover Does About-Face on Policy

By Drew Pearson

Herbert Hoover's statement that the American Navy should be used to protect far-distant Formosa must have brought a wry smile from his old Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson. For when Stimson served in the Hoover Cabinet, he waged a valiant but losing fight inside that Cabinet to take firm measures against Japanese aggression when the Jap war lords first landed in Manchuria.

HOOVER

Stimson wanted to cooperate with the League of Nations and with other countries in nipping what he quite clearly saw was the beginning of future war.

But Hoover fussed, fumed, vacillated and finally said no. At one time Stimson wanted to send the American fleet not even as far as Formosa, or to Chinese waters, but simply on a cruise in the mid-Pacific as a gesture of American strength. Again Hoover said no.

Hoover would not even permit his Secretary of State to keep American Consul-General Prentiss Gilbert as an observer to the League of Nations in Geneva. Stimson had instructed Gilbert to sit in on the League conference dealing with Manchurian aggression, but Hoover worried over isolationists in the Republican National Committee, finally yanked Gilbert out.

Today, however, the ex-President who contributed more than any one man to undoing Stimson's far-sighted war-prevention policy, now says the American fleet should be used in Chinese waters when it is too late.

Watching Big Business

It hasn't garnered many headlines, but one of the most important probes on Capitol Hill has been the monopoly investigation conducted by Congressman "Manny" Celler, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee.

Handicapped for lack of funds, and despite terrific pressure from certain lobbyists, Celler has shown, among other things, how the big insurance companies now dominate the money market, have largely taken the place of Wall Street in loaning money to business.

FDR set up the Securities and Exchange Commission to protect the public regarding stock and bond issues. But today, many big business firms don't have to worry about SEC registration. They get their money from the insurance companies.

As a result of his probe, Congressman Celler will propose legislation at this session putting teeth in the Antitrust Act.

"Today," says Celler, "General Electric is involved in 16 different antitrust suits. Why? Because the penalties don't mean much. No jail sentences are ever imposed. That's why the Antitrust Act is a joke. But at this Congress we plan to put jail sentences into the act."

'Rent Control . . .'—HST

Three recent White House visitors found Harry Truman, the President, concerned about the Nation's housing shortage; and Harry Truman, the father, worried over daughter Margaret's singing.

Both subjects brought considerable feeling into Truman's voice as he chatted with Senator Burnet Maybank of South Carolina, Senator John Sparkman of Alabama and Congressman Brent Spence of Kentucky, the big three on housing legislation.

Sparkman put in a plug for his bill to authorize long-term loans and low interest rates for middle-income housing.

"This is the last bill we need to make a well-rounded housing program," Sparkman observed.

The President heartily agreed, added that rent control should also be renewed. He suggested holding off until April, then making a last-minute study before extending rent control.

"I am convinced in my own mind," he stressed, "that rent control is absolutely necessary."
